COURT SUSTAINS $10,000,000 SHIP SUIT

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—A motion of the Emergency Fleet Corporation to have the $10,000,000 suit of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation dismissed for lack of jurisdiction was denied today by Federal Judge Mandy. The suit is to recover monies alleged to be still due on war contracts.

New York, Oct. 29 (I.N.S.).—A little band of embarrassed sailors marched up Broadway today to City Hall, where they were acclaimed heroes by Mayor John F. Hylan. They were Capt. Paul T. Grenig and his crew of the President Harding, who rescued the crew of the Italian lighted Ignazio Florio in a storm in midocean. Following the Mayor's speech, women showered the seamen with kisses.

MAINE GOVERNOR ASKS TRUTH ABOUT 'VICE AND RUM REGIME' IN JAIL

Thomaston, Me., Oct. 29.—The entire citizenry of Maine, still gasping over the amazing disclosures of alleged moral and official chaos in the State Prison, watched with ill-concealed excitement today the opening of the inquiry into the charges by Governor Brewster and his Executive Council.

On the walls of the prison citadel and in the terrain about the penitentiary, State troopers tramped with loaded guns, taking the places —three for one—of the twenty-one prison officers suspended after they had made charges.

The charges that have to do with moral laxity, official stinking at startling acts, shocking relations between men and women prisoners supposed to be in solitary confinement and the "blood and iron rule" of the prison itself by a lifer who has assumed the role of Mahatma have torn official Maine wide open.

Stories of prisoners under hospitalization allowed to visit houses of ill-repute in Rockland before returning to prison; of brutality and insolence of authority by the dictatorial lifer; of prisoners holding keys to open 150 cells and of prisoners practicing and rehearsing methods of jail escape under are only a few of the amazing allegations made in affidavits by (1)s suspended officers.

One of the suspended men is the prison chaplain, the Rev. Percy J.

MITCHELL IN ATTACKS ON COOLIDGE RIGHT TO ORDER TRIAL BY COURT

Washington, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Colonel William Mitchell's plea of immunity from military trial on the charges pending against him was overruled today in the general court-martial proceedings against him.

The court's law officer said that when Colonel Mitchell charged War and Navy Department officials with "criminal" and "almost treasonable" conduct in administering the air services, he committed an offence against military discipline and could not take refuge from punishment in the constitutional guarantee of free speech as he had sought to do.

This opinion, whose effect was merely to sustain the jurisdiction of the court and make it possible to proceed with the trial, was approved by the court itself after a short consultation in secret.

BLOCK UNANIMOUS VOTE.

The law officer, Colonel Blanton Winship, gave his opinion after the court, the prosecution and the defence had agreed to leave the point to him, but in rendering his decision he asked that specific court approval be given. An effort to have the court vote on that approval in public was blocked by an objection by Brigadier-General Frank R. McCoy, commander of the 34 Infantry Brigade, Fort Sam Houston, Tex., Mitchell's last station. The court then retired, and took a secret vote, returning after only a short interval to announce its approval.

The ruling applied specifically

GLYNN AND O'BRIEN IN ATTACKS ON NICHOLS

Charlestown was claimed for Daniel H. Coakley today in the mayoralty fight, District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien charged that Malcolm E. Nichols' campaign is one of dollars and money bags, and Fire Commissioner Glynn charged false propaganda by the "Innes machine."

These were the high spots in today's campaigning that dragged a bit, despite the nippy breezes.

Sheriff John A. Kelliher, who was to have spoken at a noon rally, did not join the other speakers because he decided to save his voice for the evening performances. O'Brien and Glynn, the former in Pemberton square and the latter in Faneuil Hall, held noon rallies.

Generous audiences listened to both candidates and at Faneuil Hall heard General John H. Dunn and Coleman Curran, fireman and war veteran, plead for the veteran vote for Glynn.

GLYNN FOR "HOME RULE."

Glynn himself characterized as "false propaganda by the Innes machine," declarations that the Glynn outlook is discouraging—to Glynn.

"The machine hopes to get you to waste your votes," he said. "We are fighting for home rule for Boston, for the right to make our own tax levies so that we may have street improvements and all the other

HUSBAND IN LOVE DUEL IS ARRESTED AT GRAVE

Charged with being an accessory before the fact of his wife's murder, Sabatino Trosi, husband of Rose Trosi, slain Monday in an Everett street, East Boston, store, was arrested today following her funeral.

Mrs. Trosi was murdered, it is alleged, by Mrs. Rosa Condia of No. 56 Bremen street in a quarrel over attentions declared to have been paid by Mrs. Condia to Trosi.

Trosi, husband, is charged with having given Mrs. Condia the murder gun half an hour before the love duel was staged, first taking the form of a hair-pulling match and ending with the fatal shots. Mrs. Condia then died and is being hunted.

The body of the slain woman was buried today in St. Michael's Cemetery, Forest Hills, and Trosi's arrest followed immediately.

MRS. WILLEBRANDT, IN HUB, SEES 'DRY' N. E.

Optimism over the future liquor law enforcement in New England, engendered by the appointment of Captain Parker as chief enforcement officer, backed up by U. S. District Attorney Williams, and expressions of quasi-despair at the great American tendency to generalize always, not only as regards prohibition, but everything else as well, marked the comment of Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant United States Attorney General, at the Copley-Plaza today.

Mrs. Willebrandt spoke to the Women's Republican Club on "Do You Know?" outlining for the benefit of her hearers those accomplishments of the Federal government, which she felt would appeal to them most.

Somewhat annoyed to find no reservation had been made for her at the hotel when she arrived, Mrs. Willebrandt was forced to delay for two or three hours some government business until assigned a room. She

$51 PROBE ABRUPTLY CLOSED AFTER CLASH

The naval inquiry into the sinking of the S51 was concluded today at the navy yard, after Earl Farwell for the owners of the City of Rome made a futile attempt to recall Captain John H. Diehl, master of the steamer.

At 12:10, following a brief executive session, Captain Orton P. Jackson, president of the court of inquiry, announced that the hearing was over, all the witnesses having been heard.

He stated that no decision or finding would be made until the S51 is raised, or, failing that, it will be made at an appropriate moment.

This finding, Captain Jackson said, will be forwarded at once to Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur.

PROFITEERS TO BOOST SOFT COAL COST SOON

Charles O'Neill, secretary of the Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers' Association hurled a verbal grenade into the conference today of the New England Governors' fuel committee and representatives of the trade at the State House, when he predicted an early and substantial increase in the price of soft coal.

With the present soft coal retail price in the vicinity of $14 a ton, Emergency Fuel Administrator Eugene C. Hultman predicted that when the increase comes soft coal will cost the consumers just as much as anthracite.

Secretary O'Neill said that the soft coal operators had been losing money from the Summer of 1923 until recently.

"Now, if they are to see profits, they must boost prices," he said.

John Hays Hammond, chairman of the committee, agreed with Mr. O'Neill's presentation of facts adding that the committee would certainly be on the alert to prevent extortion from the public.

"But greed alone would be responsible for any great increase in the price of soft coal and any such attempt to gouge the people will not be permitted to go unchallenged by the authorities," Mr. Hammond said.

"The retail coal dealers of New England stand ready to co-operate with you, but they feel they should

Notice to the Public

A meeting of the stockholders of the Checker Taxi Company was held on October 28th, 1925, and the following resolution was unanimously passed:

"That the stockholders approve the stand taken by the Management in refusing to accede to the demands of the men to operate a closed shop, and authorize and direct the Executive Committee to take such steps as may be necessary to operate the Company's cabs, to protect its property, and to give service to the public."

Pursuant to this vote, we intend to resume our service. We ask your co-operation and help. We take this opportunity to thank the public for their many letters and expressions of encouragement in our effort to conduct our business on a sound basis and in the interests of lower taxi rates.

To prevent a temporary injunction being granted, the union drivers have agreed in open court before Mr. Justice Waite of the Supreme Court not to disturb our service or molest our cars, nor to maintain pickets, nor congregate in squads in the vicinity of our premises, nor to interfere with our drivers in any way.

We know that the Police of Boston and the public as well desire to give us proper protection.

COURT OVERRULES MITCHELL "TO SAVE ARMY FROM MOB"

DECLARE COLONEL'S CHARGE AGAINST WAR OFFICIALS OPEN BREACH OF DISCIPLINE

only to that specification in the charges which applied to Colonel Mitchell's first San Antonio statement criticising the conduct of the air services, but it was in the nature of a test, and one by one the court then proceeded in rapid order to overrule Mitchell's objections to its right to try him on the remaining counts.

SUPERIORS INACTIVE.

Representative Reid of Illinois counsel for Colonel Mitchell, then moved that all the charges be stricken out. He said the court's record failed to show that the commanding officer of the accused had ordered the charges against the defendant investigated or had himself investigated the charges, as required by court-martial regulations.

"If Colonel Mitchell had been guilty of any offence," Mr. Reid said, "it should have been charged by his commanding officer at that time, Major-General Ernest Hinds, in charge of the Eighth Corps Area at San Antonio.

"The record does not show that General Hinds or Brigadier-General Rockenbach, commanding the District of Washington, thought any crime had been committed.

"Where, then, does this strange power come from that stretches out over these two commands? It does not come from the officers under whom Colonel Mitchell served in Texas or in whose jurisdiction he is at present."

S PRESIDENTIAL COURT.

Colonel Sherman Moreland, for the prosecution, replied that it was not required under the court martial regulations that either General Hinds or General Rockenbach actually bring the charges.

"This is a presidential court," said Colonel Moreland. "There is no requirement that the regulations shall be carried out explicitly, so long as the substance is there."

The charges are signed by an officer in the judge advocate general's office at the War Department, and Colonel Moreland said that the President had designated that officer to act as accuser, "as he has a right to do as commander-in-chief of the army and navy."

The reference to the "presidential court" brought Mr. Reid to his feet.

DENIES PRESIDENT'S POWER.

"I hate to think this is a case where necessity knows no law," he said. "What strange power is this we are facing? This is an abnormal case indeed.

"You don't mean to tell me that the President himself had these charges prepared? The trial officer doesn't know what he says unless my ears have deceived me. The President didn't make these charges."

The defence attorney declared that in any event he knew of no provision of the court-martial regulations "that gives the President or the judge advocate general a right to bring charges."

In the midst of the discussion the court recessed for luncheon, to reassemble again at 2 p. m.

Opening the second day's session of the court martial assembled to try the accused officer, Col. Sherman Moreland, the trial judge advocate designated by the War Department told the court that the whole system of military discipline would be upset by acceptance of Colonel Mitchell's contention that in criticising the air administration, he only was exercising a constitutional right of free speech.

This contention was advanced in a long argument by Mitchell's counsel, Representative Frank R. Reid of Illinois.

The trial proceeded under circumstances much like those which marked the first day. Colonel Mitchell was accompanied in the courtroom by his wife, sister and father-in-law, and the seats reserved for the public were occupied with a long line of would-be spectators left standing along the curb outside.

PICTURES ARMY A "MOB."

Colonel Moreland declared the defence counsel had overlooked that "element which entered into the contract made when a civilian becomes a member of the military establishment."

"The change of status from civilian to that of the military," the prosecutor said, "carries with it a very considerable consequence."

Without the right of discipline, he argued, the army would become a mob in which "the major could lampoon his colonel and the private could berate his captain before the company."

"Freedom of speech does not mean immunity in uttering criminal matter," continued Colonel Moreland. "In a military case the test as to criminality or wrongfulness is afforded by the determination whether the statement is prejudicial to good order and military discipline. If it is prejudicial, it is criminal.

CITES ARTICLE 96.

"The conclusion of law that the first amendment to the Constitution does not protect the maker of a statement prejudicial to good order and military discipline is supported by every consideration of common sense and manifest necessity.

"Congress, in the 96th article of war, has denounced the uttering, by persons subject to military law, of statements prejudicial of good order and military discipline.

"Our leading writer on military law, Winthrop, says that the general article (the 96th) covers making or causing publication in newspapers, pamphlets, etc., of strictures upon the acts or conduct, official or personal, of other officers, or upon the administration of the army.'

"Upon the same page Winthrop cites a letter from the Adjutant-General to the commanding General, Department of Texas, dated April 29, 1890, in which publications similar to those in this case are declared to be the cause for trial by general courtmartial.

Representative Reid in a short reply to Colonel Moreland, declared "he could not have made a better defense for Colonel Mitchell if he had tried."

"If all that the distinguished Judge Advocate has said is true," said Mr. Reid, "then the court-martial is greater than God himself."

'HE'S RIGHT,' SAYS MITCHELL'S WIFE

War Department 'in Bad' As Colonel Mitchell Case Starts

Washington, Oct. 29.—All over Washington today the War Department is "in bad" by reason of its blunder in selecting as president of the courtmartial to try Colonel Mitchell, Major-General Summerall, commanding the second corps area, with headquarters at New York.

Expression is given to this public displeasure by the Washington Post on its editorial page. In the course of its caustic comment upon the swift success with which Colonel Mitchell's fearless civilian counsel, Representative Frank R. Reed of Illinois, brought about the elimination of General Summerall and the substitution of Major General Robert L. Howze as president of the court, the Post says today:

"Court martial proceedings which begin with the disqualification of three members of the court are not calculated to impress the public with a sense of the impartiality of such court."

ALL FOES OF MITCHELL.

Even less is this disqualification calculated to impress the public with either the gumption or the sense of fairness of the non-flying oligarchy in the war department, upon whose recommendations the newly appointed Secretary of War selected General Albrt J. Bowley and Major General Fred W. Sladen as members of the courtmartial which is trying the army's flying colonel and fearless truth-teller.

It appears that the court was not selected at the White House but within the War Department, and the personnel was approved by the President as a routine matter upon the recommendation of the chief of staff of the Army endorsed by Secretary of War.

The fact that both General Summerall and General Bowley had made speeches recently opposing the appeal of Colonel Mitchell for the emancipation of the flying officers of the Army from the control of the non-flying oligarchy was well known to the War Department.

The speeches of these officers were widely published and clippings of them must have reached the office of G-2, which, in war, is the military intelligence branch of the Army and, since the war, has been utilized by the general staff as a propaganda factory for the influencing of public opinion in support of the program of the general staff.

MITCHELL SUSTAINED.

Furthermore, the unfavorable report which Colonel Mitchell made upon General Summerall's conduct of the air defenses of Hawaii and General Summerall's peppery indorsement thereon must have been in the files of the War Department at the time he was selected to preside over Colonel Mitchell's court martial.

Finally, the extraordinary exhibition of explosive temper of which General Summerall startled the initial session of the court preliminary to his enforced exit from the court did not make a favorable impression on the public. Apparently it was not entirely agreeable either to General Howze, who succeeded General Summerall, as presiding officer, or to the other survivors of the bombing attack with which the militant member of Congress from Illinois opened the proceedings.

SUMMERALL'S TEMPER.

For when General Howze returned to the court room, followed by the other members of the court, who had voted in secret to sustain the challenge of General Summerall by Colonel Mitchell's counsel, General Howze was careful to ignore General Summerall's indignant request that he be excused from further service on the court.

General Howze bluntly announced that the court had sustained Colonel Mitchell's challenge of General Summerall upon the grounds given by Colonel Mitchell's counsel.

Among lawyers who were in the court room as witnesses to the proceedings, the opinion is expressed that the temper shown by General Summerall while he was still sitting as president of a court about to be sworn may form the basis of an appeal to the judicial branch of the government in the event that the court should find the accused guilty.

From a popular standpoint the performance of General Summerall, who is the ranking Major-General of the army, the senior officer on the active list of the army today can hardly be helpful to the administration. That a man whose temper so quickly boiled over in the presence of the court should have been designated to preside over its proceedings does not put the War Department in a favorable light.

Among admirers of General Summerall, who was a distinguished war commander in France with a long and gallant record in the army to his credit, the excuse is made that his experience in the field is greater than his experience as a presiding officer of a court convened under the extraordinary circumstances and charged with the solemn responsibility attaching to the Mitchell court.

HENDERSON IN PEACE TALK AT HARVARD

International comity and peace never can come until Germany becomes a full-fledged member of the League of Nations, Arthur Henderson, M. P., chief whip of Great Britain's Labor party and president of the Labor and Social International, told members of Harvard Liberal Club at a luncheon given in his honor today at the clubrooms, No. 66 Winthrop street, Cambridge.

He is in the United States on a vacation and will return to England on November 11.

At the outset of his talk he requested the audience not to heckle him. Instead of delivering an address, he answered and enlarged upon questions put to him.

Mr. Henerson blamed the Versailles Treaty for Great Britain's present financial, economic and social dilemma. He stated that certain clauses contained in that instrument had diminished his country's exports especially by the mining and shipping industries which are the most important in England.

Social progression and politicel democratination will in time supercede the present government beaurocracy, he declared.

$9,800 AWARD TO WOMAN AGAINST WORCESTER MAN

A jury in U. S. Circuit Court today awarded a verdict of $9,800 to Mrs. Elizabeth Lisk of Syracuse, N. Y., in her suit for $50,000 damages for personal injuries brought against Eli Belisle, a Worcester building contractor. The injuries sustained by Mrs. Lisk followed a collision between the automobile in which she was riding and one owned by Belisle at cerfield Corners, N. Y.

LASHES FORMER KLAN CHIEF IN DEATH TRIAL

Noblesville, Ind., Oct. 29 (A.P.)—Mrs. George E. Oberholtzer, mother of the girl, Madge, for whose death D. C. Stephenson, Earl Klonick and Earl Gentry are held responsible, took the stand as the State's first witness in Hamilton County Circuit Court today, after Charles E. Cox of the prosecution had made the opening statement.

Cox charged Stephenson, former Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, with having a dual personality, and with being a veritable "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and seducer.

Mr. Cox said evidence would be introduced to show how the girl was called to Stephenson's home by a ruse, forced to drink, taken to a train and attacked en route to Hammond, Ind. The State also would show, he said, how the girl had been offered an opportunity to marry Stephenson the next day and that she refused.

Employes of the Indiana Hotel at Hammond, Cox said, would prove that Stephenson and Gentry registered there but that Stephenson used another name.

Mrs. Oberholtzer was given only a brief direct examination and then Eph Inman, chief of counsel for the defense, questioned her briefly.

Mrs. Eunice H. Shultz, who roomed at the Oberholtzer home, was in the Oberholtzer kitchen, she testified, when she heard groaning and went to the front door any saw Madge Oberholtzer being carried upstairs by a man.

She asked the man if Madge was hurt, she said, and he answered that she had been in an automobile accident. She testified that he said his name was Johnson and that he lived at Kokomo.

Irish From Eskimos? Miracles Still Seen No Communism Where Is Home?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1925, by The Star Co.

A DEEP GERMAN professor, Dr. Porkory, says the Irish are descended from Eskimos. He sees "in the isolated parts of Ireland and Scotland type of Mongol features, oblique eyes, straight black hair, thick lips."

Eskimos have nothing to do with that. The Irish descended from the Celtic race that once spread all over the Balkan Mountains, and supplied genius to Greece. The Eskimos are remnants of some inferior people driven off to the cold North lands by a stronger race.

MONGOLIAN TYPES in Ireland, Scotland, Italy and elsewhere are descendants of Mongolian slaves, of which many were brought to Venice and other European cities in the time of Marco Polo and since. The Mongol blood sticks and reappears, often, in the distressing "Mongolian idiot" of the obstetrician.

MIRACLES, so-called, still crop up, but rather feebly. In a little New York church a picture of the Madonna and Child is said to have appeared miraculously upon the wall. The church, wisely, discourages any undue excitement about it.

IN CONSTANTINOPLE a baby has been born with the star and crescent, emblem of Mohammed's power, stamped on its leg. Pious Turks, more inclined to believe in signs and wonders than their enlightened Christian brothers, are making a great fuss about the marked child.

For the average citizen of 1925 the radio is a good enough miracle and considerably more amusing and entertaining than its predecessors.

BISHOP MONTGOMERY BROWN, driven from the church by the other bishops because of his theories, wound up his speech to the American negro labor congress in Chicago with, "Long live Communism."

Leaving out the wisdom of such a wish, it can't come true. Even if Communism started, it would die out here, as it must everywhere. It does not appeal to human nature. The rich young man, told to take what he had, give to the poor "and follow ME," was much impressed, but he kept his money.

The mainspring of human activity is selfishness. That's sad, but true. There won't be any communism until you change the human race.

But there may be developed justice and intelligence that would work more benevolently than any sort of communism.

THE REAL FEELING of mankind is illustrated in a notice issued by an old farmer and printed in Senator Capper's Weekly:

"Positively no more baptizing in my pasture. Twice in the last two months my gate has been left open by Christian people, and I can't afford to chase cattle all over the country just to save a few sinners."

WHAT IS a home?

On the Atlantic side of the continent, courts say it is the place where you have your washing done. A man may vote from any address if he has his shirt and collar washed at that place.

On the other side of the continent, in Sacramento, Judge Glenn decides that your legal residence is the place where you keep your Bible and family album.

Mrs. Gainelaye's album and Bible were found in her Sacramento home, not in her Los Angeles house; therefore Sacramento is her home.

What of our great eternal home, Heaven, where, so far as we know, no washing is done, no Bible or family album is kept?

GERMANY, like Great Britain, seeks to be rid of the domination of American moving pictures. Berlin, to set an example, establishes a "National Film Week," in which only pictures made in Germany can be shown.

IDENTITY OF DONOR IS SECRET

Physics and Electrical Engineering Departments to Benefit by Gift

An anonymous gift of $75,000, to be used in annual divisions of $15,000 for increasing the teaching staff in two departments at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was announced today.

Details of the gift, to be used in connection with the departments of physics and electrical engineering, were contained in the report of the corporation visiting and advisory committees, published in The Technology Review.

It was stated the gift followed the suggestion of the committee that the staff be increased to allow members more time for original research work.

If the suggestions of the committee regarding the treatment of exceptional students are adopted, it was stated an anonymous member of the committee will offer three prizes for honor men each year.

Greater efforts should be made, the report said, to seek out exceptional students and give them intensive training.

The advisory committee appointed by President Sam'l W. Stratton, consisted of J. E. Aldred, of Aldred & Company; C. L. Edgar of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of

CASH FAILS TO REUNITE MILLIKENS

Defendant's Mother "Spent Thousands" to Preserve Family Harmony

"I don't hate that woman; I love her. I always wanted to please her and will take care of my daughter-in-law in the future."

Mrs. Annie S. Milliken of Malden testifying in the separate maintainance suit of Mrs. Alice Gould Milliken of Milton against her husband, Frank B. Milliken, declared she had done everything in her power for her son, her daughter-in-law and their two children, Frank R., Jr., 11 year old, and Parker Gould Milliken, 8.

The elder Mrs. Milliken, who is 71 years old, declared that although she had spent thousands to keep the couple together, she did "want to know where the money went."

CARELESS ABOUT BILLS.

"I want her back," the witness declared, adding that she had attempted a reconciliation and that she would spend her every cent to effect one.

She told of the high cost of conducting the household, declaring that high-powered lights were kept going all night and that bills received the first of the month indicated carelessness about incidentals; she was perfectly willing to meet the cost of the needed materials, but at the bank and the doors had been opened.

Layoff for Cops Who "Bawl Out" Motorists

Haverhill, Oct. 29.—Members of the traffic squad were informed by Traffic Sergeant G. J. Ryan that if they "bawled" out motorists they would be under the penalty of a layoff.

In the future the traffic cops are not to stop motorists who violate a law, but must take the driver's number. This ruling will put an end to traffic delays caused when officers stop motorists at busy corners to inform them that they have violated the law.

BANK MAN SLAIN $93,000 GONE

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Desperate thugs today swooped down upon an armored bank auto, killed the driver, wounded a guard and a messenger and escaped with $93,000 in cash.

Witnesses told the police one of the thugs resembled photographs of Happy Harris, alias Garfield, who jumped bail in Detroit after having been arrested charged with participation in several Buffalo payroll robberies.

Charles W. Clifford, driver of the car, was shot and instantly killed. Lewis M. Yarrington, a bank guard, and John H. Meyers, messenger, were seriously wounded.

The bank car contained about $117,000 in transit from the Federal Reserve Bank to the Bank of Buffalo, a distance of three blocks. The holdup was staged immediately in front of the Bank of Buffalo.

The police were told that three men in a large closed automobile started firing without warning as the bank car had drawn up.

SAVED FROM PAUPER'S GRAVE

Daughter, Battling Death, Unable to Aid Mrs. Tiffany, Who Was Shot

Worcester, Oct. 29.—The heart of woman reached out today to encompass the misfortune of a sister, and the body of Mrs. Mary Tiffany, slain in the Sturbridge tragedy of last Sunday night, was saved from a pauper's grave.

As Jessie, the 15-year-old daughter of the murdered woman—cut down in a double murder, an attempted murder and a suicide—lay on her cot in a Worcester hospital, the body of her mother was placed in a grave at St. John's Cemetery.

It was a grave not of the Tiffany family payment, for Mrs. Tiffany left nothing, and the daughter, still waging battle with death from four bullet wounds, could not aid.

But a committee of Worcester women, holding their identities guaranteed funeral expenses and claimed the lady for burial.

Jessie will live, it is believed, but her battle will be long and tedious. She was assured today that the last remains of her mother had been taken care of in fitting manner by the kind-hearted women, and the news brought her a bit of ease.

Eugene Holden, at whose home the shooting occurred and who himself was slain, was buried in Brookfield, and John Brown, the slayer and suicide, was buried in Sturbridge today.

GIRL 'FRESHIES' DO HAZING STUNTS

South Hadley, Oct. 29.—Leaf by leaf they tumbled down, but the giggling girlies gathered them up in bunches, or clusters, or flocks—or however leaves are gathered up.

And so was another gay, girlish idea of rough hazing freshmen carried out at Mt. Holyoke College, where freshmen are considered fresh indeed—and the sophomores fresher.

For a solid week, while the wind blew and the leaves came, the Holyoke freshmen dry and sundry leaves brigade labored manfully—that is womanly—at the task of cleaning the campus while the sophomores guffawed prettily.

Constituting the brigade were Priscilla Prior, Sally Steckel, Dorothy Cummings, Bertha Gillespie and Alice Allan, with Shirley Heltzen of Providence as captain.

"Fresh ezes themselves!" jeered the sulky sophs who had come prepared to jibe at the baby class's first appearance as collegiate serenaders, and went back, cheated.

The sadder and wiser professors merely sighed a little and smiled.

"It's like every foolish thing college girls do," quoth young Miss Helen Davis of the English department. "It's just a new song this time. Some hungry freshman, unused to dormitory fare, started singing it around the halls, I suppose, and now it's spread to a class ditty."

But were the freshies tamed? They were not. They lifted up their voices in derision, 350 freshmen voices strong, at the first official freshman class meeting and sang a breakfast song that had to do in some way or other with ham and eggs.

Perhaps the greater part of the indignation evidenced through the Chamberlain is a contracting teamster. He is interested in antiques and owns several stage coaches that Henry Ford was at one time contemplating purchasing.

DR. BUSH NOTE TO 'MABEL' READ IN COURT

The deep affection of Dr. J. Frank Bush, wealthy and aged Andover physician, for "Mabel," a "nice little thing under forty," who while a waitress at an Andover inn buttered his toast and was kind to him, was the subject of testimony in Essex Probate Court at Salem today, where the late physician's will is being fought by Mrs. Ella Von Zendeffy of New York, one of his two daughters.

Miss Theoda Bush, physical instructor at Wellesley College, to whom the physician left most of his $100,000 estate, testified that there were not "two mystery women," as had been believed in the elderly physician's life, but only one, who was "little Mabel of the inn."

The following letter to "Mabel" from Dr. Bush was read into the records:

Phillips Inn, Andover,
September 21, 1920.

Dear Mabel:

"I was glad to get your letter and and was glad to hear that you got the coat and clothes all right. Mrs. 'M' saw you cmoe out of my room, and said you are to be discharged. I am sorry if I have caused anything unfortunate like that to happen.

"I am going to be alone Thursday. Do you want to risk it?"

"DR. BUSH."

Miss Bush testified that she discussed this letter with her father, and she said she told him she was much displeased with the situation.

VISITED GIRL'S FAMILY.

"He said that the girl was nice to him at the inn, and that she had visited with him in the inn parlor," Miss Theoda testified.

Miss Bush told the court and jury "Mabel" was "under forty and nice looking—a nice little thing."

The witness said that "Mabel" had a family "up in the mountains." When Miss Bush learned that the doctor had accompanied "Mabel" on a visit to her folks, she was surprised and greatly exercised.

HEARD DOCTOR INVOLVED.

Mrs. Lizzie A. Brown of Bay State road, Boston, a close friend of the Bush family, took the stand.

"Theoda Bush told me," she testified, "that a woman whom she knew only as 'Mabel' was deeply interested in the doctor and the girl said she worried very much about it."

Mrs. Brown also told the judge and jury that she learned that the physician was involved in some sort of an affair with an unnamed waitress at an Andover inn.

Mrs. Broom testified to a conversation with Dr. Bush after the death of his wife when he informed the witness he was to make another will.

LONELY WITH DAUGHTER.

His daughter, Mrs. Ella Zendeffy, had given birth to another son, he told the witness, and he wanted to carry out a promise made to his wife that he would transfer certain stocks to his daughter Theoda.

Referring to Dr. Bush's entering "The Retreat," a Hartford sanatorium, Mrs. Broom said the doctor wanted to go because he would find fellow-physicians there, with whom he might spend his time.

"He told me he was very lonely at Theoda's home in Wellesley," Mrs. Broom testified.

Fortune in Radium Rides Dress Hem Unseen by Mob

Newark, N. J., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Dr. Andrew Wailhouser and Dr. Francis J. McCauley today told how a $5,000 bit of radium journeyed unnoticed through the city, stuck to the hem of a woman's skirt.

The radium, enclosed in a gold bulb the size of a grain of wheat and fastened to adhesive tape, was picked up by the dress of the patient from whom it had been removed, the doctors said.

From their offices the precious metal traveled to a distant part of the city in trolley cars and on the streets. At the home of the patient it was noticed and the gold bulb with the radium was returned to the physicians.

NEW ENGLAND IN FOR DRY RULE, WILLEBRANDT

was kept busy with long distance telephone calls to New York and Washington.

"Really, the combination of Carl Parker and Williams here in Boston makes me extremely hopeful for the future of enforcement here in New England. I think they are two splendid types of government officials," said Mrs. Willebrandt.

Absolute faith in the inevitable triumph of prohibition in the United States marks Mrs. Willebrandt's whole attitude. "Of course, it will eventually succeed," she observed. "The United States never has taken hold of anything it didn't accomplish yet!

"Liquor enforcement is showing up conditions, not causing them. I don't believe any law is perfectly enforced, but in the long run United States laws become measures of respect. Enforcement will come quicker in the Middle West; slower along the Atlantic seaboard. Why? The opportunities for smugglers are greater here than in the interior.

"When people lay everything they see wrong people doing today to prohibition, it makes me smile. Look back in your early development of American history. In communities jealous of Federal control and encroachment they once stoned tax collectors. They don't now. Prohibition is just another phase of the evolution of our civilization."

MRS. MILLIKEN ON STAND

said she deplored undue expense.

"I always got the boys' breakfast," testified the grandmother, adding, "they never were seriously ill, except with scarlet fever, and I brought them through that."

Tears welled to her eyes as she told of her affection for the younger Mrs. Milliken. She declared she always tried to please the younger woman.

The grandmother declared the household had no more trouble than the average family.

Shortly before noon, the younger Mrs. Milliken again took the stand and in an impressive manner said during direct and cross examination, "I love my husband and will go anywhere with him except back to my mother-in-law."

The witness said that she was now employed and was willing to continue to work to help her husband provide a home of their own.

"I know he only makes $28 a week, but with my earnings we can get along," she said.

She denied that her husband gave her $2 a week "or anywhere near it."

The two boys, ordered from the court during testimony Wednesday, were not in court today.

WASHINGTON APPROVES DENNIS BRIDGE PROJECT

Washington, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The application of the town of Dennis, Mass., for permission to reconstruct a bridge over Swan Pond river had been approved by the War Department with the proviso that the channel be cleared completely of any part of the existing bridge not to be used in the new structure.

HAZING STUNTS

song was because some of the freshmen had to shine shoes and run errands as part of the hazing program.

And goodness knows how hard it is to shine a suede pump.

But the freshies know better. It holds a deeper, darker significance. It is a battlecry of freedom, the victorious chant to which they cast off their bonds of slavery and carried Miss Katherine Goodman of Germantown, Pa., around on their shoulders—the newly elected class chairman.

A pean of joy it was, which served as a bam'n egg toast to Miss Mary Reynolds of Newton Highlands, secretary, and Georgie White of Malden, sergeant at arms, and Elizabeth Rose of Scarsdale, N. Y., newly elected cheer leader.

Now the reign of "etiquetting the Frosh" is over. It was terminated by handsome spreads given in honor of the entering classmen by their older sisters in each dormitory hall.

Yea, in token of peace, Miss Dorothy Guild of Lakewood, Ohio, chairman of Freshman Week, and her assistant, Miss Edith Deering of Portland, Maine, have even posted proclamations on the class bulletin boards announcing that no member of 1929's three hundred and fifty class register flunked Fresh Week.

PROBE OF MAINE STATE PRISON BEGINS AT THOMASTON TODAY

CHARGES OF LAX DISCIPLINE AND DRUNKENNESS MADE

ffford, former Methodist minister Winthrop, who charges religious crimination among the 275 pris-ns confined within the walls.
he investigation—despite the t in some quarters that Govor Brewster has been complacent conditions for some time—is expected to turn up a story that will stun the entire State.

Affidavits have been made by each of the twenty-one suspended officials, seventeen of them prison guards, and many of them with long years of faithful service.

BOARD INSPECTS PRISON.

Only a few hours ago the affidavits of the executive council by the Governor and his aid was blown off and the investigation begun.

Preliminary to the opening of the hearing, Governor Brewster, his executive council, and members of the State Prison Commission, made an inspection of every part of the prison.

They visited the six workshops, all of which were in operation, two of them being operated by convicts without a prison guard or overseer. Everything appeared quiet and orderly among the 257 inmates, of whom nine are women.

Governor Brewster was accompanied by Secretary of State Frank W. Ball, Manager George V. Leadbetter, Executive Secretary Charles E. Dustin, the Probation Officer F. M. Fish and H. Field, chief of the State highway police.

As the prison probe was getting under way a Maine State Conference of Social Workers met at Portland and laid out a campaign for a survey of social welfare and reform institutions in Maine.

At this meeting, Mrs. Howard R. Ives, of Portland, took the Governor severely to task for what she characterized as "a shameless way" he had publicly fled the heads of a State institution to account before even giving the institutions commission knowledge of his intention.

ADOPT OSBORNE SYSTEM.

In charge of the prison is Lester D. Eaton, wealthy, of Farmington, a man appointed two years ago when Frank E. Harrassigned to become collector of internal revenue. At the same time Lawrence E. Colgan of Augusta was appointed deputy warden.

At about the time of these appointments, Charles F. Hickborn of Augusta, member of the State Prison Commission, introduced a system of self-government among the prisoners, patterned after the Mutual Welfare Society formed at Sing Sing by Thomas Mott Osborne—"John Brown."

Under his plan, four prisoner governors were elected by the convicts to constitute a board to administer discipline among themselves. Hickborn is associated on the prison board with Henry Hastings of Fryeburg, chairman, and Phineas H. Jay of Newcastle.

But the self-government plan, according to prison officers, was far from the ideal thing they had planned.

Whisperings became noised about, rumors reached the Governor's ears—then facts came in the shape of twenty-one affidavits from officials, and the twenty-one were promptly suspended.

DISCIPLINE SHATTERED.

In the number, in addition to the chaplain, were Henry H. Russ, overseer of the woodshop for 11 years; Lester C. Lufkin, Henry R. Young, Frank F. Harding, Percy E. Averill, H. L. Thomas, Levy R. Jones, William K. Bunker, Roscoe Staples, Frank E. Allen, James A. Gilchrist and Arthur D. Kallock, guards; Hiram Comstock and Frank F. Lund, shop overseers, and Leonard C. Stetson, gateman.

In brief, the charges contained in the affidavits are that:

Discipline is the worst it has ever been.

Prisoners of one religious faith have been discriminated against in favor of prisoners of another faith to an extent that has brought about considerable unrest.

Profanity of the vilest is used by prisoners against officers without correction.

Prisoners have keys to their cells and grave abuses result.

Prisoners have brutally assaulted other prisoners and in some cases have inflicted serious injury with weapons they obtained.

Serious discrimination is practiced among the prisoners as a result of the self-system of government.

GAMBLING BY CONVICTS.

Gambling among prisoners has gone unchecked and reports to the warden and deputy warden have brought no action.

Intoxication is widespread, and narcotics are smuggled into the prison in large quantities.

Two prisoners were allowed to go to the hospital and visit houses of ill repute in Rockland before returning.

Prior to the escape of four inmates last June the four were caught on top of their cells and were allowed to go back undisciplined; two days later they escaped.

Convicts have suffered only mild reprimands for threatening to kill prison officers.

Prisoners are allowed to play a game of leaping on each other's shoulders, a game that has no purpose other than to bring perfection in scaling the walls.

A visitor to the institution was threatened with bodily harm and something approaching a riot resulted.

"LIFER" IS RING LEADER.

Officials are unable to control the conduct of prisoners.

Prisoners have access to the tier of cells used for solitary confinement and visit women prisoners.

Women prisoners have formed a practice of committing minor infractions of the rules in order to draw solitary confinement and meet male prisoners.

Through a long list the charges run, but Warden Eaton declared today that he has an answer for each and his answer will be given to the probing board of the Governor, Council and Prison Commission when he is called as a witness.

Dan Fallon, a life-term prisoner, is the man singled out in most of the affidavits as the ring leader in the turbulent conditions at the prison.

PRISONER IS STABBED.

Fallon is one of the four Governors under the self-government system in the penitentiary. Arthur D. Kallock, night guard for nine years, in his affidavit, declares:

"Some time ago, in July last, Dan Fallon, having a key in his possession, opened a cell door and assaulted a Governor by the name of Morgan.

"Soon after, Fallon was elected a Governor while he was still under punishment. This key that Fallon held would unlock more than 50 cells, as the key fits two locks in ten tiers."

The Rev. Clifford declared in his affidavit:

"Dan Fallon has been one of the worst men in the prison and he stabbed another prisoner named McRae.

"Fallon has insulted and threatened nearly every officer in the prison, including the warden and the deputy warden in their presence.

"He has publicly, in the dining room and chapel, made threats against both officers and has practically dictated all the policies and regulations of the institution."

HUB SHIVERS IN GRIP OF FIRST COLD SPELL

Mercury to Drop to Freezing Point by Tomorrow; Stoke Up Your Furnaces!

Boston awoke today to find itself in the grasp of the first cold spell of the year. The weather bureau announced that the cold will continue for several days, with the thermometer dropping to the freezing point by tomorrow.

The extreme cold spell which gripped the northwest yesterday with temperatures ranging down to 14 below, has been neutralized on its journey east, and this section will not suffer so severely.

At ten this morning the weather bureau thermometer registered 36 degrees, the lowest mark in 24 hours. Continued fair weather is promised for the next few days.

Low temperatures were general all the way from Pennsylvania and New York westward to the Rocky Mountains. Chicago reported 20 degrees, Albany 32 and Greenville, Me., 24, the lowest point reported for New England.

Ideal football weather is predicted for the week-end.

Sub-zero weather in the Middle West has shattered all October records, and those of 70 years' standing in Central and Southern Illinois fell. Davenport, Ia., potato growers estimated a loss of 20 per cent. on their crop. Rapid City, S. D., had 14 degrees below.

At Chicago, the coldest October 29 in the history of the Chicago Weather Bureau, established in 1873, was recorded.

$51 PROBE IS CLOSED AFTER DISPUTE

Navy Officials Refuse to Allow Captain Diehl to Be Grilled

ing Captain Diehl, counsel for the Ocean Steamship Company, said he wanted the witness to correct testimony of yesterday. He said that after yesterday's session Captain Diehl told him he was ill while testifying, that his head whirled and he made statements that he should not have made.

"Is your witness feeble-minded?" Captain Jackson asked.

"Of course not," replied Attorney Farwell.

He then said Captain Diehl testified yesterday he was on the port side of the wheelhouse seventeen minutes before the collision, when as a matter of fact it was only three minutes. He quoted Captain Diehl as saying he was bewildered after his long session on the stand.

The court refused to permit the recalling of the witness, and concluded its proceedings after two divers had testified to evidence previously given.

HALTED BY CLASH.

The probe came to a halt earlier today when an attempt was made to introduce evidence showing alleged reckless and efficient operation of submarines in Block Island Sound.

Attorney Farwell precipitated the clash by putting on the stand the second mate of a freight steamer and asking his opinion on the operation of undersea vessels.

Lieut. Com. Charles A. Lockwood, the judge advocate, and members of the court of inquiry, leaped to their feet in protest and declared the witness should not answer.

Farwell recalled his boast of last week that for every man the court could produce to testify as to the efficient operation of submersibles he would bring twelve men to give evidence to the contrary.

IN SECRET SESSION.

Heated words were exchanged, and the proceedings were eventually halted by Captain Orton J. Jackson, president of the court, who cleared the room and declared an executive session.

After a twenty-minute executive session, the proceedings were resumed, Captain Jackson announcing that the objection of the judge advocate had been overruled.

The witness was asked to answer "Yes" or "No" whether he thought submarines were operated recklessly.

He replied by stating that on the night of August 29, while he was on watch, a submarine emerged from the waters of Block Island Sound a short distance from his vessel. The witness said the submarine had its lights but switched on a white and red light after it had almost run into the steamer.

Litchfield testified that the submarine was only two feet away when it passed his ship, that in his opinion it was violating the rules of the road, and was operated recklessly and carelessly.

Premiere of "The Miracle" Is Most Brilliant Affair

Opera House Packed to Roof by Large and Representative Metropolitan Gathering

Betty Alden

A GALA EVENT, INDEED, was the Boston premiere of the widely heralded and much discussed spectacle, "The Miracle," with the audience filling the Opera House from pit to dome, an assemblage opera-like in numbers and brilliance, its feminine portion gorgeously arrayed.

IN THIS IMMENSE AND important company turning out for the colorful event society was finely represented, filling any number of boxes and orchestra stalls with large or small parties. Official leaders give enthusiastic presence, the arts and letters were represented, while from New York came a goodly contingent headed by the well-known financial figure, Otto H. Kahn, to do honor to "The Miracle" and those staging it.

NATURALLY MUCH interest centred in the box parties so graciously presided over by Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, who was her usual handsome self in a gorgeously tinted silver and rose gown, sheath-like as to line and worn with a double rope of pearls, a pearl-topped comb caught in her beautifully coiffed hair.

MRS. CURTIS GUILD, grande dame of the upper circles, of the Governor and Mrs. Fuller's party, was in black velvet with touches of silver, her jewels, pearls. Mrs. Daniel A. de Menocal wore a French frock combining those two colors, purple and cerise, in the inimitable manner of the Rue de la Paix, and Mrs. Oscar L. Holmes (she is the Governor's sister) was in cafe au lait with lace.

THE FULLER PARTIES also included A. Platt Andrew, of Gloucester and Washington, D. C.; the Robert A. Livermores and the Harris Livermores, Messrs. Pina and Jennings and Arthur S. Johnson.

MRS. ROBERT LIVERMORE contributed to the sartorial scheme a striking black velvet frock with cloth of gold and Mrs. Harris Livermore wore a picture frock, of soft green moire, with snug basque and long round skirt.

JO DAVIDSON, sculptor of fame, came over from Gotham in the Kahn party; also Rudolf Kommer, who is Max Rheinhardt's personal representative, and Edward Ziegler,

MRS. DONALD F. CUTLER, now guiding Vincent Club efforts, both philanthropic and otherwise, as leader of that very smart organization of feminine Bostonians.

a gleaming light of the Chicago Opera Company.

COLONEL EBEN S. DRAPER and Mrs. Draper had a party in the orchestra. Mrs. Draper wore a lovely frock of white, beautifully embroidered in a flower design done in colored beads.

MRS. JAMES JACKSON and Mrs. Harold Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., were of the smart throng promenading between the acts. Mrs. Jackson wore black with tinsel gilt motif with silk shawl of old blue, and Mrs. Coolidge donned a velvet frock carrying an elaborate flower design in beads and sequins.

THE SMART SET was further represented by that always handsomely gowned matron, Mrs. Amor Hollingsworth, in a frock, pansy-purple in tone with silver traceries on its gracefully flounced skirt.

MRS. RONALD T. LYMAN was in black velvet, with silver, and Mrs. Allan Forbes wore black also, a satin combined with white crepe, and extremely becoming.

ISADORE BRAGGIOTTI with his two daughters, Miss Berthe and Miss Francesca, were the centre of a lively group whenever they promenaded between the acts. The Misses Braggiotti wore sequined French frocks, Miss Francesca in a soft rose and Miss Berthe in old blue.

NO AFFAIR OF LARGE social consequence is complete without the presence of Mrs. Albert R. Whittier, who wore her favorite black simply fashioned. She was in the orchestra.

MRS. HUGH D. SCOTT, who came with a party to occupy vantage points in the orchestra, wore a smart gown of deep brown velvet. Mrs. Sears B. Condit, also marshalling a family group, was in blue with silver, and Mrs. William Andrews wore gray with silver lace.

OTHERS WHOSE NAMES are linked with "The Miracle" as first night sponsors are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bacon, Franklin W. Hobbs, Mr. and Mrs. H. Parker Whittington, E. A. Filene, Mr. and Mrs. Galen L. Stone, Mrs. Arthur M. Davis, Mrs. Robert Jordan, Augustus P. Goodwin, and General Andru Brewster.

ALSO MRS. CHARLES BOYDEN, Philip Stockton, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Frothingham, Eliot Wadsworth, Gordon L. Rogers, Mrs. James D. Henderson, James J. Phean, Henry Taggard, Mrs. Henry Endicott and Thayer Cummings.

A BRILLIANT FINALE of "The Miracle" premiere was the supper dance at the Copley-Plaza, staged by the Governor and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, and honoring three feminine stage stars: Lady Diana Manners, Miss Iris Tree and Miss Elinor Patterson. Society was out in force to greet them.

THE TIMOTHEE ADAMOWSKIS, S. Hooper Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Parker, Mrs. Charles Hopkinson, wife of the artist; Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Greenough, 2d; Mr. and Mrs. Gerald D. Boardman, Mrs. John S. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Choate, 3d; Miss Hope Gaston, and Miss Elizabeth Van C. Lyman were guests.

ALSO THE ROBERT LIVERMORES, Colonel Eben S. Draper and Mrs. Draper, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel DeMenocal, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Forbes, Mrs. James Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Norman W. Cabot, Miss Eleonora Sears, Frederic Cameron Church, Jr., Isadore Braggiotti and his two lovely daughters, Mrs. Curtis Guild and Mrs. Vittorio Orlandini, all of whom went to the dance from the Opera House.

MANY AT FUNERAL OF SLAIN E. BOSTON WOMAN

The Italian colony of East Boston turned out in large numbers today at the funeral service for Mrs. Rose Trosi of No. 51 Everett street, East Boston, shot to death Monday in a grocery store in Cottage street.

Rev. Vincent Parenti, pastor of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Church, officiated at the funeral mass. Burial was in St. Michael's cemetery, Forest Hills.

The police are still searching for Mrs. Rose Candia of No. 56 Bremen street, who is alleged to have fired the shots.

IRISH PRELATE TO GET RED HAT

Rome, Oct. 29, (A.P.)—Monsigner Patrick O'Donnell, Archbishop of Armagh, Ireland, is to be created a Cardinal at the next consistory, which will probably be held December 15.

A Paris dispatch said that Monsignor Cerretti, Papal Nuncio in the French capital and former member of the Apostolic delegation in Washington, also would be raised to the purple in the December consistory.

Archbishop O'Donnell was born November 78, 1855, and succeeded to the archbishopric of Armagh upon the death of Cardinal Logue last year. He was reported in a Belfast dispatch in August as threatening to excommunicate frequenters of dancing places at certain seaside resorts in County Louth.

BRITON PRAISES U. S. STORES

A business optimism in the United States that can be felt from Atlantic to Pacific is the impression gained by A. E. Cowper, director of Selfridge's, London, who, with Mrs. Cowper, is at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

Selfridge's is one of the largest department stores in Europe and was founded by H. G. Selfridge of Marshall Field's, Chicago, and modernized the department store business of London.

Everywhere he goes Mr. Cowper makes it his business to visit department stores. He describes American department stores as among the best in the world.

"They do business over here in a very delightful way, and set a standard that is very high and pleasing," he said.

They will depart tomorrow for New York and sail for England next week.

VICTIM IS NEAR DEATH AFTER SHOOTING

Physical Cultural School Owner Faces Charge in Central Court Today

James Rayne, prosperous proprietor of a physical culture school, will be arraigned today in Central Court on a charge of assault and battery with a revolver with intent to kill. His victim, Frederick W. Bowles, 26, of Wilbraham street, Roxbury, is near death with five bullet wounds in his neck, chin and arm.

The shooting followed an argument over pay due Bowles for his work as assistant in Rayne's establishment on High street.

According to the police version Rayne became angry when Bowles informed him that he did not like the place. Rayne ordered him to quit and leave the building. During the argument over the money due him, Rayne is said to have become excited and drew a 22 calibre revolver from his desk. Bowles struggled with his employer and tried to get possession of the weapon.

The scuffle attracted Ralph C. Wirth, gymnasium instructor, who tried to separate the men. Rayne finally broke loose and emptied the gun. Five shots lodged in Bowles' body while the sixth grazed Wirth's leg.

The noise of the shooting attracted Traffic Officer Edward Fallon from his post at Federal and High streets. He arrested Rayne, who was later released under bail of $5,000 and went to his home in the Copley-Plaza hotel. Bowles was taken to the Haymarket Square Relief Hospital where he is said to have a good chance for recovery.

Rayne told officers that he regretted the shooting.

London, Oct. 29 (I.N.S.).—Baron Illingworth was today granted a divorce from Lady Illingworth, the former Annie Crothers, daughter of Isaac Crothers, chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

Society gasped when William Nottage, a former employe of the baron, was named in the case.

SARGENT CASTS EYE ON TOGA IN VERMONT

Attorney-General Aims to Depose Dale and Get to Senate, Politicians Say

Washington, Oct. 29. (Universal)—Great mystery surrounds a visit by Attorney-General Sargent to Vermont where he expects to remain until November 10.

Friends of the Attorney-General assert that he merely went to see his new grandson. In political circles it is stated that the grandson merely masks Mr. Sargent's real purpose which is to depose Senator Dale, and to obtain the nomination for that office for himself.

Senator Dale is frankly and openly at outs with the administration. He refused to go along with it in both the "coal pay bill and the Soldiers' compensation bill.

Dale is well aware that he is up against a bitter fight within his own party for renomination. Should he be defeated in the primaries it is more than likely that he will run as an independent, thus giving the Democrats a chance to win by the Calnet it is more than likely that Charles Beecher Warren will be named to take his place.

Use Olive Tablets Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.

SAYS BALMWORT IS QUICK--SURE

The following is typical of thousands who have expressed extreme satisfaction at the quick, mild, balmy action of Balmwort tablets: "I was troubled with my kidneys and bladder so bad I could only work a few hours a day. At night was up and down 3 to 4 times, and in the morning could hardly bend over to dress myself. I took one box of Balmwort tablets and never have been troubled since. Also have recommended to others and they have found relief, etc."

be consulted, not dictated to," he added.

President Clark of the New England Coal Dealers' Association criticised the committee severely, charging that the failure of the committee to advise the consumers to stock up last April and May was responsible for the present scarcity of hard coal within the State.

"The retail coal dealer in New England has been carrying an inventory account for eighteen months that will average more than $20,000,000," he declared. "This, as you business men know, is a costly proposition."

Chairman Hammond told the conference that, based on past figures, New England will require about 4,000,000 tons this Winter in addition to stocks already on hand for householders.

URGES ANTHRACITE BOYCOTT.

Commissioner Hultman suggested the soft coal dealers should establish a system so retailers would be assured of getting supplies at lowest prices.

Thomas F. Farrell, repeesenting the Smokeless Coal Operators' Association of West Virginia, said he was willing in 1917 for attempting to bring about a price agreement. He did not care to repeat his experience.

John F. O'Connell, chairman of the Boston Chamber of Commerce fuel economy committee, urged the governors to send an ultimatum to the anthracite miners to resume mining within ten days or suffer an anthracite boycott.

IT IS SAID, falsely, that women have no sense of humor. Marian Brazer, a lady accused of passing bad checks, buying $35,000 worth of jewelry with the proceeds, and then the bars of her prison at Hackensack, took with her a young lady of sixteen named Alice Cedarholt, accused of disregarding social customs. Miss Brazer's note, addressed to the jailer, wound up, "Laugh this off."

ONLY YESTERDAY wise ones called the airplane an "amusing but dangerous experiment," one that would never become practical. In London, the Vickers flying machine concern took up a party of fifteen in the air, served a luncheon with lobster salad and champagne, flew for a while against a fifty-mile gale, came down, and the champagne in the glasses was not spilled.

That machine, loaded, weighs 16,000 pounds.

This nation invented the flying machine, and is far behind other civilized nations in its development. Our Intelligent Navy Department doesn't even know how to keep such seaplanes as it has from being wrecked in a little wind. But thanks to Henry Ford, who isn't in the Navy Department, the country will catch up.

FATHER OF 8 JAILED, FINED $750 IN RUM CASE

Frank Gargone, a father of eight children, of Lexington street, West Newton, received the maximum penalty for violation of the liquor laws in Newton Court today when Judge Thomas Weston, characterizing the case as one of the most flagrant ever to come before him, sentenced him to seven months in the House of Correction and a fine of $750. Gargone was arrested after Newton police followed his car to Waltham and seized a quantity of liquor. The police raided his garage and confiscated liquor valued at $3,000 and equipment for redistilling denatured alcohol. Gargone appealed and was held in $2,500 bail.

Rub the Chest

For Deep, Heavy Colds

Here is the best way to get rid of a bad cold. First apply hot wet towels over throat and chest to open the pores of the skin.

Then massage briskly with Vicks for five minutes, spread on thickly and cover with two thicknesses of hot flannel cloths. Leave the bedclothing loose about the neck so that the vapors arising may be freely inhaled. These vapors, inhaled with each breath, carry the medication directly to the affected parts.

At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin, helping the vapors inhaled to relieve tightness and soreness.

IRONWORKERS AWAIT NEW WAGE PACT

100 Strikers Remain Out, While Small Group Returns to Work

A small group of striking structural ironworkers, the number intermittently, resumed work today at the old wage of $1.10 an hour, and about 10 others elected to remain away from their jobs, pending the outcome of a new wage and trade agreement which will be negotiated at a conference called for today. Employers and strikers will be represented by five members each at the meeting.

AT $1.10 AN HOUR.

John F. Walsh, secretary of the Building Trades Employers' Association, today stated all strikers who had resigned to work today, would be paid the per-strike rate of $1.10 an hour, and not $1.25, the scale they seek.

"Five members of each side meet this afternoon to arbitrate a new trade agreement, which of course includes discussion of a wage scale," Mr. Walsh said. "Until we arrive at an equitable and satisfactory settlement, the understanding with strikers is, that they can return at the old $1.10 rate."

OUT TWO WEEKS.

Although the strike has been in progress for two weeks, many ironworkers have gone back to jobs which pay the rate they are fighting for—$1.25 an hour. These were hired by contractors who are members of the Building Trades Employers' Association, strikers say.

In a statement today, James A. Murphy, business agent of Local No. 7, Structural Ironworkers, said the five members chosen by strikers to mediate with employers would be given one week, commencing today, in which to achieve satisfactory results. Otherwise all arbitration proceedings will be abruptly terminated and the dispute will revert automatically to the former strike status.

HARVARD MEN TAKE RECORD OF TRAFFIC

Twenty Students Count Autos at Congestion Points to Solve Problem

Students of the Harvard School of Landscape Architecture, taking the city planning course, were given the opportunity for practical work today when more than 20, placed at heavy traffic centres in Cambridge, studied traffic conditions, taking count of passing machines and estimating the amount of foot traffic.

The work was conducted under the supervision of Charles W. Eliot, 2nd, grandson of President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard, and a landscape architect who, together with Professor Henry V. Hubbard of Harvard, have been appointed a committee by the college authorities to investigate traffic conditions around the college properties.

The increased traffic in Cambridge, Mr. Eliot said, with the great amount of foot traffic in the vicinity of the Harvard buildings presents an ever increasing problem. The task ahead of him is to study existing conditions with a view to suggestions for improvements to take care of the future growth of the traffic.

The Harvard students assisting on the work were volunteers and checked the steady stream of traffic for an hour today from 8.30 to 9.30. They will make a second check this evening for an hour from 5.30 to 6.30. This checking, Mr. Eliot said, is merely the first step and that an extended study of the situation confronts the committee before they will be ready to make a report.

U.S. Judge Lowell Issues Writ in Favor of Everett Sisters

Federal Judge James A. Lowell saved from deportation—for the time being at least—Assunta and Filomena Magno, daughters of Dominick Magno of No. 133 Main street, Everett, who had been barred from the United States by immigration officials on the alleged ground that they were likely to become public charges.

Attorney Cornelius Keating of this city started habeas corpus proceedings and brought the matter to the attention of Judge Lowell, who, after a short hearing, ordered writs to issue, thus restoring the girls to liberty on $500 bail each.

DRINK WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Tablespoonful of Jad Salts if Back Pains or Acids Irritate

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To help neutralize irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

U. S. PROTESTS SHELLING OF DAMASCUS

Sends Note to France Remonstrating Against the Imperilling of Americans

Washington, Oct. 29 (I.N.S.)—The American government has lodged an official protest with the French government over the bombardment of Damascus by French artillery and the unnecessary jeopardy to American lives that such a procedure entailed, it was admitted today at the State Department.

In setting forth its displeasure over the summary action of the French administration in Damascus, the United States has rang d alongside the British government, which also has protested, it is understood.

There are many Americans in Syria, many of them naturalized citizens, but a good many native-born.

Yankees in Damascus Protected by British

London, Oct. 29 (A.P.)—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Jerusalem quotes the statements of a "reliable British refugee" from Damascus recounting his experiences during the recent bombardment there.

"On Monday morning, October 19," said the refugee, "the French vacated the entire Christian quarter, which then was at the mercy of the Druses and Moslem robbers.

"I realized that it was unsafe for the missionaries to remain, unprotected from the fire of the French guns at the citadel and the Salvative quarter, so, with a Moslem police escort, I took eleven British and American missionaries to the British hospital.

"On their arrival the police donned plain clothes and hid their rifles. About 5,000 Christians availed themselves of the protection of the British hospital. Tuesday morning I tried several times to telephone the British and American consuls, but all the wires were cut.

"I saw a Moslem mob loot the French barracks and then try to enter the Christian Quarter, but they were prevented by about 50 other Moslems with sticks, swords and spears. The Christian Quarter was entirely saved by Moslems.

"The casualties were estimated at several thousand Syrians killed and about 300 French. There were many instances of cold-blooded shooting by French soldiers. Three officers were seen making a Moslem dig his own grave. He was then shot and buried in it."

Why?

Why are barber poles painted red, white and blue?

Frank Lapaglia, down on Hanover street, snapped at his own barber pole and then opined that it was because barbers were all good Americans and flouted their patriotism, as it were. But he's all wrong.

Why?

Pete, who wields a wicked razor on members of the Boston Evening American staff, says it's an heirloom from the original hair cutters back in the Dark Ages.

In the olden days," Pete says "the barber was also the blood letter, as all diseases in those days were cured by letting blood. The shoemaker had a shoe, the blacksmith an anvil, and the other trades their distinctive signs to hang out in front. But the barber had none. So some wise chap thought a striped with red for the blood, blue for the veins and white for purity. He advertised that he's let red blood out of blue veins in a clean manner. And the custom has come down through the ages.

Maybe you've got a "Why?" or an answer to a "Why?" already published. It's a great game. Send your letters to the Why? Editor, Boston Evening American.

CHILDREN AT PLAY ARE AT MERCY OF MOTORISTS

SAVE-A-LIFE!

It is better to lose a few minutes than your life. Slow down if you cannot see where you are going.

The autoist who kills a child bears a heavy responsibility. Slow down when children are in sight.

The day before yesterday, while an investigator in the Boston Evening American's "Save-a-Life" campaign was taking the names of little children in East Providence, R. I., who have learned how to cross streets without risking their lives, five-year-old Georgie Doyle of that town was run over and killed by an automobile.

There were other "Georgie Doyles" killed that same day—many of them throughout the country; there were many more again yesterday, and today and each day in some little "Georgie Doyles" will be slaughtered pathlessly on our highways—unless "Georgie Doyles" learn how to avoid such ghastly deaths, and meet with co-operation on the part of the drivers of the "instruments of death."

With the closing of its "Save-a-Life" campaign next Saturday the Boston Evening American feels that it has, at the very least, advanced the ideas of many in the right direction, namely: To a realization of the ever-increasing "steel monsters"—the automobiles.

There are two days left during which the Boston Evening American will reward those autoists and children who help the "Save-a-Life" cause by helping to save their own lives as well as the lives of others.

To the child, the auto is not the only hazard on the street, however, there is also the trolley car. In Lynn, just a day or so ago, Alvira Pixby, seven year-old daughter of Dr. Oliver E. Pixby, barely escaped death when struck by a trolley car while running to school at the beckoning of the school bell.

Last year the Aborn School, where this little girl attends, won the National Safety Council prize as the most effecient school in the conduct of a safety campaign.

The winning children who have been awarded safety rewards by the Boston Evening American have accomplished something that all children should attempt, and that is, the habit of self-preservation.

There are yet one hundred more children to receive the Boston Evening American's reward. Watch for your names, children.

Winning children living in Boston may obtain their rewards at the office of the "Save-a-Life" Editor.

Winning children living outside of Boston may obtain their rewards by mail if they will let the "Save-a-Life" Editor know what day their names appeared in the Boston Evening American.

Although the campaign closes next Saturday, winning autoists and children are entitled to their rewards until a week from the date of the appearance of their name in the paper.

SAVE-A-LIFE CHILDREN

The following named children have been awarded a two-dollar bill. Boston children may claim their rewards at the office of the "Save-a-Life" Editor on the first floor of the Boston Evening American building, Winthrop sq., any day except Sunday before 5 p. m. If accompanied by an older person. Checks will be mailed to children residing outside of Boston, if requested. This offer expires at 5 p. m., November 5.

The Pimpernel and Rosemary by Baroness Orczy

A Story of Love and Mystery That Bares the Heart of the Chief Plotter

PETER BLAKENEY, a carefree young man, is in love with Rosemary Fowkes, but he forgets to propose, and Jasper Tarkington wins her. Rosemary, a writer, is induced to go to Transylvania and arrange a series of articles intended to clear the air of much international unpleasantness. Instantly she finds herself in the midst of a group of plotters. Even her best friends are arrested as spies, and though her husband is a great help, he always seems to fail in his efforts. So Rosemary decides to watch and wait.

Jasper had done his best to explain things, but Rosemary was not satisfied; she was suspicious without knowing why. "See if you can't do something," she begged.

CHAPTER XXVIII

"THE whole thing is a mistake," Rosemary said cooly; "some error in the name. Count Imrey is a loyal subject of the King. General Naniescu himself is a friend of the family. And Lord Tarkington and I can vouch——"

"Pardon, milady," the civilian broke in coldly. "This affair does not concern you or Lord Tarkington, and the order of eviction is signed on behalf of the present owner of Kis-Imre by His Excellency the Governor himself."

"On behalf——"

It was Rosemary who spoke, but the sound of her voice might have come out of a grave. She had never been so near to swooning in her life.

"On behalf of the present owner of Kis-Imre!" But that was Peter! Peter! And the world did not totter, the earth did not quake, and engulf all these monstrous crimes, this cruelty and this shame.

Jasper pronounced himself ready to go and break the news to Maurus.

"You will be very patient, Jasper,' she begged, "and very, very gentle?"

"Leave it to me, dear," he responded, "I'll do my best."

When he was gone, Rosemary mechanically asked the officer and his companion to come into the smoking-room and sit down. They explained that their duty consisted in seeing Count Imrey personally, and giving the eviction order into his own hands.

"It will kill him," Rosemary said, with conviction, "or else send him out of his mind."

Both the men shrugged. They had seen so much of this sort of thing, one of them said, people always threatened to die or to go mad but nothing of the sort had ever happened.

A few minutes after Jasper returned and Maurus was with him. At sight of Maurus, Rosemary had risen from her chair as if drawn up by mechanical force, and she remained standing, staring at the man whom she had last seen as a fragile weakling, babbling incoherent words. Maurus had dressed himself with unusual care.

The officer and the civilian had risen to greet him, and he went up to them with perfect calm, inquiring politely what they desired to say to him. Rosemary turned a questioning glance on Jasper. He, too, appeared puzzled.

But nothing happened. Maurus took the order and read it through carefully. Not a muscle of his face twitched, and his hands were perfectly steady.

Man of Mystery

"I quite understand the position," he said quietly. "If I had bought a house, I, too, would wish to take possession of it as soon as possible. Perhaps," he added, with a smile, "I should not have been quite in such a hurry, but we all know that with the English time is money, so, remember?"

The two Roumanians took their leave with their habitual elaborate politeness and Maurus himself saw them to his front door, where the squad of soldiers still stood at attention. When they had all gone, he came back into the smoking-room, and he was actually laughing when he entered.

"Did you ever see such swine?" he said lightly, and then apologized to Rosemary for his language.

"You are taking it so bravely, Maurus dear," Rosemary murmured bewildered. "But what about Eliza?"

Safe by Now

"Oh, she prepared me for it: she knew all about it yesterday, and she sent me word what to bring along in the way of clothes for her."

Sixteen cars were smashed and the engine of the colliding train practically demolished.

Miss Cooper, who is about fifty years old told physicians at the Lynn Hospital, to which she was removed by an automobilist, that she "just walked" in the water.

She was unconscious when rescued but was revived on the way to the hospital. It is said that she will recover.

SHOWCASE THIEF SWAPS HIS OLD SHOES FOR NEW

Washington, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Washington police are looking for a man with a sense of humor and a new pair of shoes from a sidewalk showcase and left his old pair there instance. The new shoes apparently were a good fit for the specimen.

PROMOTER IS MOVED TO TEARS

Wondrous Spectacle at Opera House, Back Bay, Seen by Many Notables

A stocky little figure of a man, tears trickling down his wan face, stood last night on the apron of the Boston Opera House stage as the minutes ticked on to a new day.

Incense filled the air—sweet, heavy, cloying—a blue haze that hung like a filmy canopy over the throng "out front."

Above, behind and to the sides framed the massive lines of a vast cathedral, Gothic, high-vaulted, awesome in the shadowy expanse.

The figure, tired, limp and drooping, yet happy to the zenith of human feeling, was that of Morris Gest—and in the sight of the silent throng seated before him, he was living back through three decades to the meagre Boston days when his dream of a miracle that had now come to performance was only a dream.

For years he had dreamed his dream and for months he had labored unceasingly, day and night, at a stupendous task.

REALIZES DREAM.

Now, with the Boston premiere of "The Miracle" behind him, he stood before the men and women of his boyhood city to take his acclaim—and could not take it except in tears that had not been part of his miracle dream.

But the joy and satisfaction of Morris Gest were there, and he told of the night in a chilly wind-swept Boston street when, as a newsboy, he tried to bribe his way into a Boston theatre through the gift of a newspaper to the doorman.

It was a fitting climax to an evening of awe and enthrallment interpreted to the society audience through the first performance here of "The Miracle" master effort of the master.

Not even the warm tribute to genius paid by Mayor Curley in conveying the keys of the city for opportunity to view the spectacle, was needed to heighten the color of the occasion and into the deepest shadow of the cathedral recesses, the color sent its light.

MOVING SPECTACLE

Rarely has a Boston first night audience, a society first night audience been favored in a more moving setting.

Rarely has a spectacle such as "The Miracle" been given to their ken in a Boston theatre—and never one so pretentious or in such an ideal sphere of somber grandeur. And the audience thrilled and was visibly moved by the beauty of it.

Leaders of social life, rulers of the state, theatrical men and women prominent—and the favored of the masses fortunate enough to have been able to secure accommodations in the amphitheatre, filled the Opera House and hundreds of others were there who, to take their places, had the price been available.

HIS OWN "MIRACLE."

In the gleam of the showhouse lights—a gleam of brilliance reflecting and glinting on it in the shine of the rain wet streets—they came all school and entered to view "The Miracle." That was Morris Gest's own promise.

Some of them arrived up into the smoking area, tiny feet twinkling across the wide of sidewalk, as the theater doormen doors slammed, voices murmured in the foyer and music played softly.

Faces from the blue book, the register of society—pretty things that go to make a great city.

"THE MIRACLE," INSPIRATION BRILLIANTLY CONCEIVED, IS THEATRE'S GREATEST

"We are slamming back into the teeth of those arrogant and brazen pirates of the public rights."

In the Coakley behalf, Senator William Francis of Charlestown declared in a statement today that, despite declarations by Martin Lomasney, Charlestown is solid for Coakley.

Speaking for himself, District Attorney O'Brien characterized the prediction made by Daniel H. Coakley that O'Brien and Keliher would withdraw from the mayoralty race in favor of Nichols, as a "deliberate lie."

The statement which aroused the ire of the district attorney was made by Coakley in a speech at the Municipal Building at Dudley and Vine streets, Roxbury. It was one of the most spectacular rallies of the campaign.

While none of the mayoralty candidates who are in the race can really withdraw their names from the ballot, it has always been their privilege to get out of the contest and advise their supporters to throw their strength to some other candidate.

In a letter addressed to the 5,000 Boston members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, General Dunn, who is past national commander of the organization, told his comrades of "No" votes by Nichols in the State Senate when bills dealing with veterans' aid and preference were considered.

Joseph H. O'Neil made a political speech over the radio and told his unseen listeners the story of his life and his accomplishments, and also his abilities.

Sheriff Keliher in his speeches makes it a point to impress his hearers that he is in the fight in earnest, and to stay until the last vote is counted.

W. T. A. Fitzgerald plans what he calls a "Victory Ball, Halloween Party and Victory Rally" in Mechanics Hall, Saturday night, and he said he expects to have 10,000 present.

Says—Now Stiff Joints Must Go!

New Discovery Limbers 'Em Up and Even the Creaking Ceases After Using Joint-Ease.

Yes: it's true—the world progresses.

All you have to do nowadays to limber up that old, stiff, creaky knee joint is to squeeze a half inch of miracle-working substance from a tube.

Then rub it on the offending part for about a quarter of a minute or until it soaks through the skin and disappears on its errand of mercy.

Then read the evening newspaper and go to bed.

The chances are that your misbehaving knee joint will lose its "creak" while you are dreaming about the high fences you used to leap when you were a youngster.

"And in the morning," says one who has tried the new discovery, "you'll feel so happy that you'll want to jump into your sportiest clothes and walk briskly down the street just to show the neighbors that you are not as old as they think you are."

Joint-Ease: They call this wonder-working substance, for the reason that when ordinary remedies fail to limber up the stiff, painful rheumatic joint or reduce the swelling, Joint-Ease succeeds.

It's a good name for a good, clean, stainless prescription that in just a few months has proven to a multitude of people that lame, swollen, distorted joints can speedily have the kinks taken out of them and work as smoothly as ever.

But Joint-Ease is for bothersome joints, whether in knee, elbow, ankle, hip, shoulder, spine or finger, and for that purpose its sale, at 60 cents a tube, is immense.

All druggists sell dozens of tubes of it every week and druggists everywhere report a big demand.

Always remember, when Joint-Ease gets in joint agony gets out—quick.

Joint-Ease Is Biggest Selling Joint Remedy in the World

Niland Claims Lead in Ward 1 Council Race

Former Representative Thomas N'land says he is in the race for the Ward one, East Boston, council berth. Niland's career is a record of service to the common people, his managers assert. "I promise to serve to the end of the term I will seek no other office and I will be present at every meeting," Candidate Niland said today.

FINDS CAMBRIDGE MAN'S BODY HANGING IN SWAMP

Westboro, Oct. 29 (A.P.)—The body of John F. O'Leary, fifty, of Cambridge, a patient at the Westboro State Hospital, was found today in the Metropolitan Swamp, a quarter of a mile from the hospital, hanging by a wire. Ray Taylor, an employe made the discovery while on a hunting trip. O'Leary was a trusty and wandered away last July. At that time a search was made for several days. The body was removed to the hospital and Medical Examiner Dr. Roland F. Newton pronounced death due to suicide.

NAVY DIVER NEAR DEATH FROM 'BENDS' IN S51 WORK

He was rushed here on the navy vessel Vulcan, attended by Lieutenant C. J. Fiorta of the medical corps. The diver's illness is technically known as caisson disease and is usually contracted by rising too suddenly to the surface from a great depth.

No Partisanship in His Motives, Says Nichols

By MALCOLM L. NICHOLS

When I entered the contest for Mayor there was but one other candidate in the field—and he a Democrat—in a city said to be Democratic by more than 60,000 votes. After I announced my candidacy, several other Democrats decided to enter the contest. It is, therefore, somewhat amusing to me to be told that I am attempting to break up the Democratic party.

Malcolm L. Nichols

As a matter of fact, I am not conducting a partisan campaign. I happen to be a Republican, but I have made no appeal for partisan votes, and I know of no Republican, and no Democratic, way of running a great city like Boston.

NON PARTISAN SUPPORT.

As a matter of fact, many of the enthusiastic members of my campaign committee are prominent Democrats in the city of Boston, men who have a very earnest desire to have their city given a real business administration. Prominent Democrats are speaking for me every night, and each day brings to my office additional endorsements from members of that party.

It has been stated that I discharged by the wholesale competent men in the Internal Revenue office because they were Democrats. Emphatically this is not so.

FAIR TREATMENT.

It is a fact that no competent employee was ever discharged by me because he was a Democrat. Elsewhere I have been charged with appointing and retaining employes because they were Democrats. And this is equally untrue.

The records of the Bureau of Internal Revenue will show that I always followed the rule of retaining and employing competent clerks and deputies. During my term of office not one complaint was ever officially made that I had acted in a partisan manner.

In all of the public offices I have held I have endeavored always to treat employees with fairness and consideration. That will be my policy as Mayor of Boston.

"Barnums" Conducting Campaign, Says O'Brien

By THOMAS C. O'BRIEN.

The campaign at the present moment is more like a competition of showmen than a dignified contest for choice of a decent and reputable candidate for Mayor.

Thomas C. O'Brien

Like Barnum, most of the candidates are doing their best to fool the people, but so many of them are working at the trade that the people were never so little fooled as they are today.

The big Barnum is working from City Hall and his chief rival is Dan Coakley, who has been running a Punch-and-Judy show all over the town, entertaining even the little children.

He is the best Mr. Punch since the days of Frank Pryor and he is having a lot of fun mimicking everybody and knocking the dolls around on his little set-up. It will be well for the public not to laugh too much at Dan's show, however, as they may have to pay for the piper, and Dan knows how to make people pay until it hurts.

CURLEY TOUTING.

Jim Curley is touting for the sausage salesman, Teddy Glynn, as his headliner. Teddy was built for the sideshow, but Jim is barking him up for the big tent.

Mr. Curley, however, does not bark so loudly for anyone as he does for himself and the result is that not many persons are passing through the crowd.

The reason Mr Curley barks up Teddy so tamely is that he realizes he went the limit on nerve when he made Glynn the commissioner of all the Curley tribe of department-head misfits. Glynn is the worst.

It is a question whether or not he could pass a civil service examination as chief clerk in his own department. He has so damaged the morale and discipline of the fire department that it will take four years to restore it to its former dignity and efficiency.

The hand-shaking fire commissioner has taken all authority away from the officers and every fireman is his own captain.

The fire department is a joke. When you see the apparatus on the street you cannot tell whether it responding to a fire or turning out for a Glynn rally.

POLITICAL CLUB.

The two platoon system has been converted into a political club. When a platoon is on duty it is busy shaking hands with the commissioner and when it is off duty it is run ning around scouting for votes. And all this is possible in the city of Boston because Jim Curley runs City Hall as he would run a saw dust ring.

Charley Innes, the Republican Barnum, has as his attraction M. Nichols, the non-partisan chameleon who changes color according to the light that is playing on him.

As collector of internal revenue he fired Democrats to make room for the Innes gang and he is telling the rest of the gang that he will make room for them at City Hall as soon as he gets the chance.

At the same time he is telling the Democrats who work at City Hall that they will be perfectly safe with him.

If the City Hall employes want to know how much they can trust him it is only necessary to talk with those who have suffered from Republican treachery and to get a look at the long-tailed bread line of Republicans who are parading behind Nichols with their eyes on the

NORWICH UNIVERSITY TO REBUILD AT ONCE

Northfield, Vt., Oct. 29 (A.P.)—An administration building larger than Dewey Hall, which was destroyed by fire last Saturday, will be built at Norwich University it was announced today after a meeting of trustees. Immediate construction of a three-story building to replace the two-story one that burned was authorized.

RECORD OCTOBER SNOW IN NEW YORK STATE

Binghamton, N. Y., Oct. 29 (A.P.)—October snow records for 35 years were broken today when 2.1 inches of snow fell in Binghamton and vicinity. The fall was twice the depth of the record in October, 1907.

A score of automobile accidents were reported because of slippery streets.

Service to Boston Sole Aim, Says Fitzgerald

By WM. T. A. FITZGERALD

Wholesome government, conducted by a wholesome mayor and administration and one representing the majority party of our city—that, in my opinion, is what the voters of Boston most desire and which they can receive when they cast the polls a few days hence.

Wm. T. A. Fitzgerald.

Preliminaries in preparation for the skirmish have been completed; the lines have been drawn up and the real battle is on. In a few days the voters will decide for themselves who shall be the next mayor of Boston.

I believe that the voters will, in casting their ballots, overthrow the attempts to have "bossed government." I am satisfied that the people want a mayor who has no entangling alliances, who will conduct the affairs of the city honestly and faithfully and on a basis of service to the city and the people only. The people do not want a mayor who shall be that in name only, while the bosses keep their fingers in the pie.

PLEDGES ECONOMY.

The home-owner and rent payer are those most concerned in the present mayoralty fight. As Register of Deeds of Suffolk County, I have continually urged upon the workingman to own his home. It dates are saying about each other is there that real happiness is to be found.

Heavy taxation must be laid upon the home owner and the rent payer as well. If elected mayor of Boston, I give my solemn word to keep taxes down to the very lowest point consistent with improvements absolutely necessary in our city.

As the first Democratic candidate on the ballot to get public record, which I throw open for examination to the public, I appeal to the Democrats to stop the out-threat opposition to my candidacy and unite behind me to see that Boston would be represented by a mayor who has never bolted his ticket and who has successfully won every contest in which he has been entered.

ASSIST HOMEOWNERS.

Moreover, the majority party can be assured of a man who seeks only to serve the city best by serving the people best, whose desire it is to keep taxes at the lowest possible point and a man who is the champion of good citizenship by not only advocating citizens of our city to own their own homes but has always, during his public service endeavored to assist them in so doing this.

Boston is my native city and it is here that I shall always remain. Moreover, the name of Boston is good enough for me and I emphatically object to having it changed to "Innesville."

If what the various other candidates are saying about each other is true, there is only one course left for the honest voter and that is to support me. I am appealing to the people on my record and not upon my ability to indulge in personalities or to throw mud.

The three candidates who are spending the most money and spreading the greatest propaganda are the hand-picked candidates of the political machines who are desirous of getting control of the city treasury, for their own selfish ends. I am the only genuine candidate in this contest who can honestly say I want to make a clear and would have no debts to pay at the city's expense.

I am prepared to serve the citizens of Boston with a free hand and to do it fearlessly.

MELLO AND JONES IN PUNCHING BOUT TONIGHT

MADDEN IN GO WITH SEIFERT

New England Ring Stars Receive Severe Tests in Tussles at Arena

BOXING MENU TONIGHT.

1—Peter Godin, South America vs. Eld Roberts, Boston, eight rounds.

1—Barney Keeley, New York vs. Sonny Andessano, East Boston, eight rounds.

1—Jimmy Madden, Roxbury vs. Sonny Seifert, Pittsburgh, eight rounds.

1—Al Mello, Lowell vs. Jimmy Jones, Youngstown, O., ten rounds.

By JACK CONWAY

AL MELLO, Lowell welterweight sensation, will take his dynamite punches at Jimmy Jones' iron chin in a ten-round battle at the Suffolk A. A. show at the Boston Arena tonight.

Jack Conway

With six straight knock outs to his credit, Mello says he will also knock Jones out of the picture. Al does not believe there is a fighter in the world who can stand up under his driving punches.

This bout will be the big test for Mello. It will prove whether he is a title possibility.

Jones is one of the outstanding stars of the welterweight class. He was one of the ring's favorite at odds of 10 to 8.

Jones' fourth bout in Boston was with Sheridan, Dave Shade and Billy Sayre have all gone down in defeat at the Youngstown batter in rather fast ring battles.

Jones is the kind of fighter who will give Mello an opportunity to use his celebrated punch. Like the Lowell welterweight Jones is also a socker. He does most of his heavy mauling with his right hand. This is the blow that enabled him to beat Shade and Sheridan.

JONES is also aggressive which will put him in a position from which he can work with his right hand smashes.

Mello on the other hand, uses his left jab, which will keep Jones' southpaw and set stage for his right foot exploit. Joe Lea Tondler and Johnny Wilson were the son who had to put up a fight against Mello is one of the most promising young lookers in the welterweight class. Although only eighteen years old, he has defeated such dangerous fighters as Mickey Walker and Tom Gibbons in the welterweight class.

Hailing from Lowell, Mello graduated from the ranks of the amateurs after representing the United States at the Olympic games. Since quitting the amateurs Mello has taken on all comers and has won impressive victories on account of his tremendous punching power.

THE Boxing Commission recently ruled that Mello was good enough to meet the outstanding men in his class. An attempt was made to match him with Eddie Sheridan, and when the match fell through Jones was secured to oppose the Lowell sensation.

As Jones and Mello are both wide-open fighters, the fans should witness an old fashioned punching duel.

It will be the case of a youth, flushed with victory, determined to batter down a seasoned ring campaigner, who has wins to his credit over some of the world's leading welterweights. Mello is presented with the opportunity of becoming a national boxing attraction over night.

FLATLEY CALLS 'EM

Series Will Be Early That Goslin Trade Harvard and Condition Hard Work Might Help

By NICK FLATLEY

SOME twenty or thirty prominent baseball fans have declared for series in favor of an earlier start. I notice that Judge Landis, Paul Mindil and a few other baseball executives have declared for an early start.

Nick Flatley

The idea of the contest is not a bad game. It was a tremendous and thrilling spectacle for the fans in the middle as any sport event ever staged, but it wasn't keen. The game had to be played, however. Any deal might have occurred. The series into real winter and kept the players and the camp followers living among most of the Winter in Pittsburgh.

BOB QUINN of the Red Sox has a very sensible piece for the baseball fans. Here's what he proposes: "The players that go to Seattle when ever they are," says Quinn, "is $250,000. Where would I get $250,000? I put every cent I had in the world into the Red Sox in the last couple of years, and what I can get together in the future will have to buy a lot of ball players."

Between what he lost at Fenway Park, and has tied up in young players, President Quinn has tossed more than $300,000 around in the breeze. He'll get it back, because he's a slicker, but it proves him a bit to have expensive trades pinned on him.

THE Senators may trade the wild Goose, though we doubt it. He's a mighty useful ball player, and young as the good ones go. He did get a bit puffed up during the Summer. He felt his oats, as a hero member of a team that had won its second championship. He stepped out a bit, and was promptly fined $100 by Stanley Harris. That fine yanked the Goose out of a batting slump. It started him playing real ball. It accomplished its intended effect and left no personal soreness. The news of that fine is back of the deal chatter. Harris will change his team some but hardly in the outfield.

WRITERS all along the line are noticing that Harvard football teams no longer seem to be in the physical condition that means victory. The Crimson started off with a great rush against Holy Cross, then faded. The Worcester youngsters, overpowered in the first period, had the endurance and pushed Harvard all around in the second. The same thing was true of the Dartmouth game. Harvard very nearly scored at the start, lagged and stodgy at the finish. The boys don't quit. They fight their heads off, and are plugging just as fiercely as ever, but they haven't the lift that is a condition seems to plue other teams.

TREAT DIAGNOSES HARVARD'S FOOTBALL ILLS

EXPERT NAMES 4 REMEDIES

Crimson Can't Cope With Present Opposition Under Existing Conditions

By HERB TREAT

Boston Evening American football expert, whose remarkable work in picking the winners of the big college games is the talk of New England.

WHAT is the matter with the Harvard football team? This question, asked and answered by about everybody that knows the shape of a football and a lot more that possibly wonder why the chalk marks run crosswise on the field instead of up and down, is one that I would like to give my views on.

Because of the recent defeats the Daly-Fisher coached team at Harvard, every newspaper in the country has come out with the cry "The Big Three is a misnomer" and "Where do they get that Big Three stuff?" These remarks would be justified except for the fact that these three colleges never have claimed, nor do they now claim, to be unbeatable. And, also, I don't doubt for a moment but what those very people who are "razzing" the so-called Big Three refer to them as such, more than the three legal undergraduates or alumni of Harvard, this season, was beaten two weeks ago by Holy Cross, a team of veterans, which, after four consecutive defeats at the hands of the Crimson, managed to win by one point. And Holy Cross was outplayed.

Herb Treat

Last Saturday a team from Dartmouth defeated Harvard 33 0. Dartmouth has been known to be one of the three best teams in the East each year and with a greater abundance of good material than ever. At that the Crimson totally outplayed that great team the first quarter of the game. The line and backs held their own the second quarter, but the forward pass defense weakened, which resulted in a touchdown for Dartmouth.

Even though the Harvard team was behind it still fought to win. It scored a touchdown later in the game and was a constant threat when in possession of the ball. When a defense for forward passes goes up in the air it sort of takes it out of the line. The line seems to say to itself "Oh, what's the use?"

Taking it all in all, I believe the Harvard team isn't so bad after all. It surely is as good a team as any coach could produce.

Not to discredit Hawley, for I have always thought of him as about the best, but if Hawley or even Rockne were coaching Harvard I doubt if a better showing could have been made against the last two opponents that the Crimson have entertained.

Either might have taught more deception and possibly placed Miller on the second team before this, but crosses, shifts, defence, etc., will not win football games against two such teams as the Crimson played, without the old material.

At Harvard there are some good players in the making, but it takes more than a month to make them. Against Princeton this Harvard team will be better, against Brown better still, and against Yale it will reach that stage where these people I refer to expect it to reach in a month.

Daly was a great football player, a great soldier and has proven himself to be a great and inspiring coach. But Fisher certainly must know guard play, as he was one of the best in his day, and after having succeeded in bringing four of his teams out of six up to beat Yale, he must know something else, too.

Leo Leary, the end coach, has always crashed through in the past with a couple of good ends, whether he had the material or not. Nobody thought he could possibly come through this year, but to my mind, the Harvard ends so far have been as good, if not better than, any others that have come to the Stadium. Bradford, Sayles, and Saltonstall would have looked just as good on the Big Green Team as Sage and Tully. Everybody seems to star when on the winning team.

And then we come to Charley Tierney, the line coach. His line was outplayed by that of Dartmouth, but not by a wide margin.

The Green line was superior, but not better coached. The Harvard linemen were properly distributed at all times, blocked four kicks, and held pretty well considering that there was little if any help from the defensive backs.

We now come to that word that all of us find so much trouble to evade, IF.

1 IF Harvard will in some way or other fix its entrance requirements so that it will allow more to enter that are good students and something to give Harvard for what they take away, men who have a personality and even though they are athletes, don't place a premium on them, but be more liberal to, even if a man is shy one, two or three college board credits give that fellow a chance.

He will possibly turn out in the end a good student, perhaps a Phi Beta Kappa, but at least one that will be a credit to Harvard and also of some use on a football field. Once a man gets in he makes some wild finishes and turns out better than the ones who had the required points does not prove that the ones that do get them are better students or have better brains.

The examination idea is not fair. It makes it harder for athletes to enter Harvard than any place else I know of, as athletes as a rule, especially those coming from high schools, can't get the required credits demanded at Harvard.

The college board exam requires special tutoring and training that athletes in high schools can't begin for. I had to transfer from one as I didn't have a chance [illegible] get [illegible] Princeton. I would have had to pass only a few [illegible] other subjects.

It seems to me more absurd than that [illegible] and I'm sure Yale is not the two schools would [illegible] let an athlete in college on trial any way, even if he has the entire fifteen.

2 IF Harvard will start practice on September 1, the time it is necessary to start if a winning team is to be produced in mid-season, those that start on that date by [illegible] will be better. Otherwise [illegible] tent [illegible] are all [illegible]

3 IF Harvard will get more boys athletes especially, direct from the high schools, rather than make it an almost close competition for those from exclusive prep schools it will be better.

[illegible] the last [illegible] the Harvard team are [illegible] there were developed more high school boys on the squad than on that of the [illegible] High school players are usually coached than the prep school player.

4 IF Harvard will let the general alumni, the people to whom Harvard owes its very existence, have more to say, rather than a selected few, the chances are that Harvard, one of the greatest of [illegible] institutions, will have a real football team. But those few don't want Harvard to have a real football team as they do not consider football as played [illegible] essential to the good of the university.

While such conditions exist at Cambridge, it is in my opinion impossible to cope with its present opposition on the gridiron.

Herb Treat will cover the Columbia-Cornell game for the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Treat's Tips Friday

ALL day last Friday the football fans were calling up the Sporting Department, begging for info on what teams Herb Treat was picking to come through on last Saturday. So this week we shall give ON FRIDAY an early dig off on Treat's selections. Just a bulletin. The detailed info will be in the four-page Saturday Sport Special.

Of the eight big teams that will be playing on Saturday next, Treat has seen five in action this year. He has studied Yale, Penn, Army, Brown and Dartmouth WITH HIS OWN EYES. He has the low down on them.

In the Saturday Sport Special will be play-by-play stories of the Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth and B. C. games.

HARVARD SUBS TO GET CHANCE SATURDAY

By TED LYNCH

A patched up lineup will represent Harvard against William and Mary College of Virginia at the Stadium Saturday. Head Coach Bob Fisher has come to the conclusion that what real grit material he has on his squad should not be risked in a game which should result in an easy victory for the Crimson.

In the scrimmages this week the Crimson mentor has kept Captain Cheek, quarterback; Madison Sales, end and Eddie Bradford, tackle, on the sidelines.

Jack Ada ms, end, Pratt, tackle; Kilgour, guard; Bill Macomber, center and Joe Crosby and Flem Clark, backs, will be the only veterans to get into the game.

In Sayles' place at the wing, the position has not decided as to who will start. On the other side of the Harvard flank playing the opposite position to Pratt, will probably be found Brainard Taylor, the 183 pound Harvard senior. Taylor has won the position over Carl Lindner during the past three days. Lindner's showing was none too encouraging in the Big Green melee.

To fill Bradford's place will be a hard proposition. The most likely candidates for Leo Paley's old position are Bertie Tripp, a freshman guard, last fall, and George Hosmer, a 189 pounder. He also should win the line berth because of his three years of varsity experience.

Old Pipe, we're pals for keeps

SIX months ago, Old Pipe, we were headed for absolute divorce. We were wrecked on the twin rocks of Tongue Bite and Throat Parch. I tried tobacco after tobacco. Then . . . I found Prince Albert!

Today, Old Pipe, you're closer to me than a tattooed anchor. P. A. made you sweet and cool as the wind from a laden orchard. P. A. led me out of the hot-pipe desert into the pleasant valley of contented smokers. Comfort fell upon me . . . and it was welcome as rain to a dusty frog.

Say good-bye to worry, you fellows who don't yet know the joys of a jimmy-pipe and P. A. Tell gloom to be on its way. Your first fragrant pipeful will give you a 99-year lease on happiness. Prince Albert is the mildest, sweetest, kindest smoke mortal man ever knew.

Prince Albert gives you a lot more for your money in quantity as well as quality. There are TWO full ounces in every tin of P. A. The U. S. revenue stamp shows you that. Make a break now for the nearest shop where they hand out pipe-peace in tidy red tins.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red pocket tins, pound and half pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bite and puff removed by the Prince Albert process.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!

Look at the U. S. revenue stamp—there are TWO full ounces in every tin.

PIMPERNEL AND ROSEMARY

By BARONESS ORCZY

A Story of Love and Mystery That Bares the Heart of the Chief Plotter

"But what does Eliza feel about it?"

"The same as I do. She writes quite calmly."

"When did you hear from her?"

"Early this afternoon, so you see I was prepared."

"But where is she?" Rosemary asked insistently.

"She was at Sot when she wrote to me. She had seen Philip and Anna And she was on the point of leaving for Hodmezo. This was late last night. She is in Hungary by now—and in safety. Please God I shall be with her soon."

But though Rosemary ought to have felt reassured and comforted about him, she could not rid herself of a persistent feeling of dread, the same sort of feeling that invades the nerves at the manifestation of a supernatural phenomenon.

Jasper all the while had been strangely silent. Rosemary could see that he was just as much puzzled as she was, and that he was studying Maurus keenly while the latter was talking.

"My chief cause of regret, dear Lady Tarkington," he said, "is that I cannot welcome you here when you return from your journey. But perhaps we could meet at Budapest, not? Eliza speaks about that in her letter to me. She is very anxious to see you."

"I shall break my journey at Hodmezo," Rosemary said, "and probably wait there twenty-four hours till you come."

She had it in her mind that she could wire from there to the Times office, and in any case she had to see Eliza.

"There are two good hotels in Hodmezo," Maurus rejoined. "Eliza is staying at the Bristol. Peter Blakeney's cricket people stayed there last week, you know."

He then could mention Peter's name calmly.

"I shall not forget the Bristol at Hodmezo," Rosemary said, after a little while, "and I will certainly remain with Eliza until you come. Perhaps I can help her to endure the suspense—"

"Perhaps."

"How did her letter get to you? Through the post?"

Two Brave Lads

"No; she sent a peasant over from Sot, a lad who lives in Kis-Imre, and was returning home. You know him, dear Lady Tarkington—him and his brother—the two sons of Janos the miller."

"Those two brave lads who——"

Rosemary paused abruptly. The last thing she wanted to do was to bring back to Maurus' memory the fateful night of the children's abortive escape.

"Thank God," Rosemary exclaimed fervently, "they did not suffer for their devotion."

"No, I am glad of that," Maurus concluded, with obvious indifference. "But the authorities don't trouble about the peasants. It is the landed aristocracy and the professional classes who have to suffer, if they belong to the conquered race."

It was past 10 o'clock before the small party broke up.

The soldier-chauffeur brought the car round at 11 o'clock. Rosemary took affectionate leave of Maurus.

"We meet very soon she said "In Hungary."

"Yes," he replied, "in Hungary I shall be so thankful to be there."

He also shook hands very cordially with Jasper.

"I am afraid this has not been a very agreeable stay for you," he said.

"Better luck next time," Jasper responded, as he settled himself down beside his wife.

What Has Happened?

Rosemary must have fallen asleep, for she woke with a start. The train had come to a halt, as it had done at two or three stations since Cluj was left behind. So it was not the sudden jerk or the sound of the engine, that had caused Rosemary suddenly to sit up straight, wide awake and with that vague feeling of apprehension which comes on waking when sleep has been unconsciousness rather than rest.

Jasper sat in the other corner with eyes closed, but Rosemary did not think that he was asleep.

Rosemary pulled up the blind. They were at a small station dimly lighted by one oil lamp above the exit door. A couple of soldiers stood at the door through which a number of peasants, men with bundles and women with baskets were filing out.

From the direction of the engine there came the sound of two men talking. Otherwise nothing. Feeling unaccountably agitated rather than nervous, Rosemary called to Jasper.

"What is it, my dear?" he asked vaguely. "Where are we?" And he added, with a shake of his long, lean body: "These carriages are deuced uncomfortable."

"We are at a small station, Jasper," Rosemary said. "And we've been here over half an hour. Have you been asleep?"

"I remember this confounded train pulling up. I must have dropped off to sleep after that. I wonder where we are."

"We can't be very far from the frontier. I thought at first they would turn us out for the customs, but there is something. But nothing has happened, and we don't seem to be getting on. I do hope there has not been a breakdown on the line."

"My dear!" Jasper exclaimed rather impatiently, "why in the world should you think that there is a breakdown on the line? There's a signal against us, I suppose. That's all."

But Rosemary was not satisfied. "Do you mind," she said, "seeing if you can get hold of anybody. I can't help feeling nervous and——"

At once Jasper was on his feet, courteous, attentive as always. "Of course I'll go and see, my darling," he said. "But it's not like you to be nervous."

Ancient Rivals

DRAWN BY ELEANOR HOPE

WAS Mother Eve a blonde or a brunette? Did the Mother of us all look upon the wonders of Eden out of eyes of heavenly blue or were they black as sloes? Did Father Adam rave over the golden glory of her tangled tresses or did he compare them to the ravens wing?

Alas, these are things we shall likely never know! But—we do know that Mother Eve was all woman, therefore she ate of the forbidden fruit, and it is certain that she viewed with disapproval those with locks of contra-hue. And so it has gone through the ages. The frail, fair beauties have ever looked askance upon the dusky charms of their rivals, who in turn give back "like for kind."

Each has her wooers, each the spark divine to set men mad with a mischievous glance. So pout not, neither should you sneer, for the world is wide and there's room for each to move gaily in her sphere.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

By Queen of Rumania

A MOTHER TO HER DAUGHTER.

MY little Queen daughter was learning life and her duties, and they were not all of them easy in an unknown country amongst strangers. And I, her mother, having waded through similar difficulties many years ago, wrote her the following advice:

My child, when you want to get at the heart of people approach them through their children. No one can resist the interest shown in their child.

HER FINEST INK QUEEN OF ROUMA

You feel a heavy atmosphere around you, sulky servants, bored ladies and grumbling gentlemen. You don't know what to do. Try this: When your servant brings in your tea, look up casually and ask how many children he has. You will see his brow clear. He is suddenly no more a puppet but just as human as you. He will tell you even about the pimple on his baby's nose! He has become fluent and all distance is leveled between you.

"Bring them to see me," you say, "even the baby wi the pimple on its nose . . ."

And when the man carries the tray out of the room he d parts as your friend.

This recipe can be applied to high and low alike. T your lady to bring her daughter next time she comes to te Tell the grumbly general that you admired his girl's dress the court ball and ask if all his children have such beautif hair. You'll see the grumps melt miraculously!

Work a little cap and send it down for the cook's chi She'll love cooking your supper that day.

Believe me, my little Queen, you as well as your cook are to be got at through your child. It is the most natural pride of a parent's life, or ought to be. Parenthood is a form of immortality . . .

And remember this: When the child DOES come to see you, have always a toy for it to play with or a box of candies ready to feed it with. Because the child must also carry away a sweet remembrance of his Queen!

MAKING A HUSBAND

By Ann Lisle

"BREAKFAST is ready!" I called ten minutes later, feeling most unyielding because I had not laid a place for the visitor.

"Then I'll be running along to work!" he called. I'll be back later today, if Miss Harrison doesn't mind. We might go chestnutting, the three of us. And perhaps the three of you will dine with me."

"Not tonight!" cried Jeanie in a high, insistent voice. "I don't live here. I just motored over. I'll be over again next week, perhaps. You might give us dinner then."

"How she'll say something about Pat," I though.

And when Jeanie came in from the back porch I asked at once:

"Did you explain that 'Miss Harrison' is not your name?"

"Did you give your right name?" Jeanie mocked. Careful what you say. The place is pinched!"

"That's a little common, don't you think?" I asked severely.

"You are the most serious-minded young person I've ever known, Virginia complained, laughingly. "Really, Anne, can't one have an amusing conversation with an unusual person without giving him a look at the family tree and showing him every apple on every branch? I've always thought it was silly to go about labelled 'Mrs.' Men don't change their names when they marry. Why should we? I can't see why a casual acquaintance should not be as much interested in the fact that I'm my father's daughter as in the fact that I'm my husband's wife. Mr. Perry doesn't know Pat. He didn't know my father. He isn't likely to see me again"——

"Why not?" I asked.

"I mean's be here much." Virginia said with sudden seriousness. "Because of Jim?" I asked.

"I could manage to avoid him," Jeanie said flatly.

"Wouldn't it be hard—and foolish to do that?" I asked.

"Perhaps," Jeanie said. "I'm not ready to see much of Jim, though I can't forgive him for what he has done to the family name. And it doesn't seem quite—cricket to come if I'm not willing to take the bitter with the sweet. No, Anne, on the whole I think it's just as well if you come to Dreamwold when you want to see me. Better, perhaps."

There was something in her tone I didn't like. There was something I liked still less in the queer inhibition which kept me from leaning forward and saying:

"Come, Jeanie, tell me what's on your mind!"

For a long time after Jeanie left The Birches I pondered her odd conduct. If any other woman had taken the attitude Jeanie had employed in talking with our neighbor, Nicholas Perry, I should have thought her a very modern person, to be termed either a "vamp" or a silly flirt. But Jeanie! It wasn't possible to think of stately, dignified, reserved Jeanie in such terms After a while I gave up contemplating the situation, chiding myself with the admonition that there wasn't any "situation" save as I manufactured it by absurd thinking along the wrong lines. And when I began busying myself with housework, Jeanie and her odd actions quite escaped my mind. I got the house in apple pie order by mid-afternoon, and then began elaborate preparations for a meal.

I sliced tomatoes and boned and mashed sardines, designed odd bits out of green pepper and deviled eggs. These, with a covering of Russian dressing, were to be the appetizer for dinner. I stuffed a chicken with cordied apples, made shoe-strings of potatos to fry Julienne fashion, baked a rich cheese cake, shelled lima beans and setting things back on the stove, I laid the table with all the best things I could find in The Birches.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I loved a girl dearly and made many sacrifices for her. She moved away and finally wrote stating she was married and had a baby.

Recently she wrote to me that she was coming home for a week and wants to see me. She says I am the man she loves, and she made a mistake in marrying the other man. She stated that he is good to her but she loves me more than ever.

I still love her. I would appreciate your advice regarding this matter.

ROBERT.

DO you think a woman so disloyal to the husband whom she has sworn to love and will prove a desirable friend to you?

Write this married woman, who is trying to make love to you, a short note, telling her it will be impossible for you to see her. Resolve—and live up to the resolution—not to break up another man's home.

DAILY SHORT STORY

GRANDMA AND THE YOUNGER GENERATION

By Louise Perle Armstrong

The Holworthy family sat at [illegible] it was a sunny Sunday [illegible], a day for lazy comfortable [illegible] but a strange and un[illegible] seemed to fill the at[illegible] and check all friendly con[illegible].

Father Holworthy directed his un[illegible] attention to a copy of "The [illegible] nearly folded near his pla[illegible]. Mother Holworthy rustled the cup[illegible] as usual, while Dolly stared [illegible] her reflection in the mirror on th[illegible] opposite wall lost in dreamy a[illegible] contentment.

Grandma watched the outward [illegible] family scene with a [illegible] pleased smile upon her placid, [illegible] face. Unobserved by the [illegible] lation, even the surface of th[illegible] made peculiar bulges now and again [illegible] her bat-like eyes narrowed [illegible] fine as to conceal from [illegible] keen and dearest the little [illegible] of humor flitting in their depths.

Door Burst Open

The door burst suddenly open and Jackie, young hopeful of the Hol[illegible] worthys, reached his empty [illegible] in a bound.

"Grandma, why must you be so [illegible] old?" asked Dolly, with a [illegible] brows and [illegible] and [illegible] habit.

"Dolly, as dreadful as [illegible] being old is, I cannot help saying again, it's not fair to Tom," commented Mother, in an aggrieved tone. "I've always thought him a splendid young man, one in a million. It's a shame to [illegible] so indefinite."

"And keep us all in such a state of suspense," burst forth the irrepressible Jackie.

"John Holworthy," began Father menacingly.

Dolly arose from her seat with flashing eyes.

"Not even peace during meal-times!" she exclaimed. "I'm sick of Tom and his secret proposals—and I'll not be hustled to by my family. I'll not be married at all. Now that's settled."

"I wouldn't turn Tom down if I were you just to spite the family!" It was Jackie who spoke, and his sensible roguish face was set in grim lines.

Lucky Chance.

"You're lucky to get a chance at him, if you ask me!" he continued in tones of ringing contempt.

"Well, I'm not asking you, Smart Aleck, nor anyone else!"

And Dolly flaunted from the room, her head held high.

"Powder your nose, Sis. It's shiny!" called Jackie after her as a parting shot.

"Tut, tut," said Grandma sternly. "What is the younger generation coming to? Such manners—yelling at table, and ragging your sister! Thought you'd be a little more dignified, Jackie, when you put 'em on!"

Jackie [illegible] dancing down [illegible] seriously at his first long ones. He pulled up the creases a little at the knee and peered into the mirror to adjust his tie.

"Every inch the man of the world!" murmured Grandma with a giggle.

"Aw, you being awfully funny now, aren't you?" exclaimed her grandson, tempering his impertinence with a bear-hug that made the old lady gasp for breath, clutch at her glasses and cry "Stop it, you young scamp!"

An hour later, on the comfortable verandah, air of languor settled upon the heads of the house. Father flicked his cigar ash, his feet upon the rail, and mother was immersed in a new copy of a woman's journal. Grandma's rocking chair swayed back and forth, lightly, as a branch waves in the Summer breeze.

A low-swung, blue roadster rolled jauntily up to the Holworthy's gate, and the family arose en masse, all drowsiness cast aside, and clattered down the steps to greet the smiling young man at the wheel and exclaim over his new acquisition.

"Golly, she's a peach, Tom!" Jackie cried, eyes shining. "A regular humdinger."

Surprise for Dot.

"Oh, Tom," exclaimed Dolly, "it's a beaut! Didn't know it was coming so soon!"

"A surprised for you, Dot," answered Tom. "How about a ride this afternoon—try her out—huh?"

"Sorry, ole dear," a cool formality intruded itself in Dolly's words. "Already have an engagement. You ought to have told me sooner."

Oh all right. Sorry." The happy light died in Tom's eyes.

He was about to turn away, when Grandma spoke.

"It's a beautiful car, Tom, and I'd like to go for a ride right now! Have you time to drive me around the Loop?"

"Sure Grandma Holworthy!" replied the young man, springing out. "Fact is, I'm dying to show off to somebody!"

Grandma settled herself in the seat, a pink glow of pleasure on her round wrinkled cheeks, and they started.

"Gee, but you look pretty this morning," Tom exclaimed. "I have noticed before how alike you and Dolly are. Your ways are alike too. Sometimes you tose up your chin, and open your eyes wide, just as she does!"

"I may seem alike, but I must say I have never experienced the difficulty she seems to be having, making up her mind," retorted Grandma.

Tom flushed painfully.

"I wish the family would let her alone, he said emphatically. "There's no sense trying to force her into marrying me, if she doesn't want to!"

"There's something in that!" answered Grandma reflectively.

Week Passes

A week passed, and again it was Sunday morning. The heads of the family were at church [illegible] by a reluctant Jackie. Grandma rocked calmly upon the veranda, but within the house two very indignant young persons faced each other across the gate-leg [illegible] in the dining-[illegible].

"Please pardon me, but it's none of your business, Tom Winston," cried Dolly with flashing eyes, and I'll drive with him all I please."

"Then I'll make it my business!" said Tom grimly. "The fellow has a bad reputation, and I won't have you going about with him!"

"You won't, huh?—"

Dolly's retort was cut short by a muffled roar from without. They sprang to the door just in time to see Tom's car disappearing around the curve of the road in a cloud of dust. Grandma's chair was empty, and her fan lay open on the floor where she had dropped it.

"She's driven it off!" exclaimed Tom. "She asked me all about the gears last week, and she thinks she can drive!"

"Come on," cried Dolly in a stricken voice. "Lets get someone to follow and stop her before she gets killed!"

Together they raced out. They found the village street deserted, not even a flivver in sight. Panting and gasping for breath they raced breakly in the direction of the disappearing car.

"Oh, Tom," Dolly's voice broke with tears. "We'll never catch her. If we hadn't been fussing about nothing at all, it wouldn't have happened! I feel that it is a judgment on me!"

"Nonsense," said Tom "It's nobody's fault. It's silly of you to feel that way about it."

Just For Spite

"But I've been so mean to you lately—just to spite the family I have!"

"They've been trying to bull[illegible] into marrying me," said Tom, wiping her dust stained face with his pocket handkerchief. "You don't have to marry me, Honey, if you don't want to."

The shrill blast of a siren smote the air, and they looked up to see the runaway car, and Grandma, a the wheel, returning 'around the bend'

With a grinding of all the brakes, she drew up to the curb b[illegible] them.

"Get in," commanded Grandma. "Racing down the road in all this dust. I declare!"

"Grandma, you might have been killed," sobbed Dolly, in a reaction of relief.

"It was a very foolhardy thing to do," snapped Tom.

"Nothing of the kind" snapped Grandma. "Young man, I've driven spirited horses before you were born and I'm going to order a car this week! I knew I could drive it," she added triumphantly. "I've watched you closely, and it looked easy. A very nice man helped me turn it around."

"If suppose you two have broken off for good now," she asked [illegible] Dolly squeezed into the seat beside her, and Tom took the wheel.

"What put that idea into your head?" asked her grand-daughter.

"Why Tom and I have never had a cross word—but a really serious misunderstanding! We were just getting [illegible] with when you started off on this crazy escapade, and nearly scared us to death."

"Queer children," murmured Grandma. "Never know just what they are going to do!"

Tom grinned

DR. REED'S SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

WITH the return of cold weather you are liable to attacks of influenza, variously called the "gripped" or just "flu."

The disease is caused by a germ and you are more liable to its effects in Winter than Summer because it thrives in low temperatures.

This germ, taken in by the air you breathe, begins operations on the first surface with which it comes in contact and which is moist enough to make it stick.

That is the reason why the disease generally begins with the "sniffles" and more or less soreness in the nose and throat.

There the germs multiply with great rapidity, a new generation being born about every twenty minutes.

They immediately begin the manufacture of poisons, or toxins, which, absorbed into the system, give you fever with pains in your head, in the back of your eyes, in the back of your neck and in the muscles of your arms and legs. You are, in fact, liable to say, "I ache all over."

Of course, the same air carrying the same kind of germs goes into your lungs, where they provoke secretions and cough.

In some cases, especially in these in which the coughed-up mucus from the lungs and throat is swallowed and not expectorated, the intestines become infected, causing cramps and diarrhoea, often with nausea and vomiting.

In still other cases the poison attacks and debilitates the heart.

When the blood stream becomes actually infected with the germs themselves they may be carried to and become active in any tissue or organ of the body, eyes, ears, lungs, kidneys, heart and liver.

It is for this reason that, paradoxical as it may seem, many people die from influenza about the time they are getting well. That is because thinking they are better than they are, they impose burdens on these diseased organs, especially upon the heart, that they cannot stand.

In influenza the only safe way to get well quickly is to get well slowly.

If the precaution is not observed, even when an immediately fatal result is obviated, the changes in the heart, lungs and kidneys may become so established as to lead to permanent invalidism and ultimate death.

FOXY GRANDPA'S BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

"I THINK I'll build a fort," said Bobby as he jumped up from the sandy beach where we had been sitting, way over on the Malay peninsula in southeastern Asia.

So Bobby got to work, and how he did work. The castle had four towers on it—one on each corner—and a fine, broad rampart.

He dug and dug and was almost around the four sides, when he suddenly stopped. I could hear his shell scraping against something.

"What have you struck, Bobby?" I asked.

MISS MARY FRASER,

Dorchester, Mass.

"It's an egg, Foxy Grandpa!" shouted Bobby.

"And a big one, too," said I, as I saw the big egg uncovered.

"I do believe you've cracked it, Bobby. That is too bad."

Then it happened.

The crack grew longer. Then another crack appeared. Then right before our very eyes came a bill right through that shell.

Out came the body. The newly hatched bird wiggled right straight out of its shell, stood on its feet, gave a wiggle and a shake and flew right straight up in the air and lit in a tree.

"Foxy Grandpa!" shouted Bobby. "Isn't that wonderful for a bird to hatch out and know how to fly right away?"

"Nothing is surprising in this place," said Bunny. "There are many strange sights to be seen here. By the way, that bird is called 'Wallace's Malay' and the eggs it lays are almost as big as itself. Those mothers know it pretty easy. Just let the sun hatch out their babies and then don't even teach them to fly."

FINANCE

By B. C. FORBES

Can you picture a workman making a long address before a body of college students? One has done it, and done it extraordinarily well.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology asked Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, to talk before the class in engineering administration. Mr. Swope, a graduate from the Institute but also a graduate from overalls, suggested that it would be more helpful to have one of their workmen appear before the prospective graduates, and it was so arranged.

Stanley S. Ringer, a tool-maker in the West Lynn shops, was chosen. He not only made a long address, but promptly answered more than forty questions fired at him by the students.

The constant complaint is that when youths leave school or college and plunge into the work-a-day world, they are absolutely ignorant concerning the stern realities of earning a living. Would it not be extremely useful were schools and colleges throughout the country to follow the example here cited?

The General Electric workman was asked to tell something of the men's relations with the company, particularly its plan of representation. Here are points from Mr. Ringer's talk, which should interest employers and employes alike:

"Our plan of representation was instituted at the Lynn works following the settlement of a strike which brought approximately 14,000 men and women on the street on July 18, 1918. The plan was officially inaugurated on November 25, 1918, and has been in operation ever since.

"Our plant is divided into sections, each one aiding approximately 500 employes. Several sections are grouped into shops, including a total of not materially more than 5,000 employes. Each section elects by secret ballot, from among their number, two representatives to serve one year.

"If an employe feels that he has a grievance, he has the right to take the question up directly with his foreman, accompanied by one or both of the representatives of his section. Failing to get satisfaction, he can put his case in writing and refer it to the shop committee. This committee, composed of three management representatives and three from the employes, tries the case.

"If they cannot settle the matter, the case goes to the section superintendent. If he cannot settle the case, it next goes to the general joint committee on adjustment. To this committee fails to settle the case it goes to the manager, whose decision is final.

"Whenever a committee gives a unanimous decision there is no appeal."

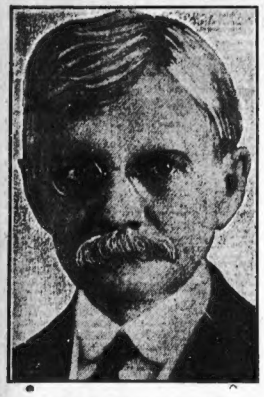
10,000,000 Fords Driven by 10,000,000 Americans

That Does Mean Stability. Marshall Was Right



Thomas R. Marshall, late Vice-President. He knew the meaning of PROPERTY.

The late, genial and lovable Thomas R. Marshall, Vice-President of the United States under Wilson, had a sense of humor that few possessed.

But he wasn't joking, or being "funny" when he said:

"So long as 10,000,000 Fords are driven by 10,000,000 Americans God, in His Heaven, and the Government at Washington will continue to live."

Ten million Americans, driving 10,000,000 Fords, represent a good part of the backbone of this country. The other millions of Americans, driving other cars, most of them bigger than Fords, represent another part of the backbone.

Other millions of Americans that will soon be driving automobiles plus the 10,000,000 Fords with 10,000,000 drivers, will mean safety for the Government.

What every government needs is stability.

The Government means safety for the citizens, their families, and their possessions.

Government is first of all, apart from patriotism, THE PROTECTOR OF PROPERTY.

The law says "That is yours and I shall see that nobody takes it from you."

The law says "This is yours, have a right to hand it on to the children, and I shall see that the children get it, even though they be infants unable to protect themselves."

The man with an automobile has something to show for his life, and get something out of life. He takes the family with him when he goes out, feels that the roads of the United States were built partly for him and that the beauties of nature were created for him.

Ten million men driving ten million Fords and millions of other men driving millions of other cars, are indeed a power for stability in government.

It would be a good thing if there were still more men with cars and more especially if there were more men OWNING THEIR OWN HOMES.

The strength of France lies in the fact that the land of France, once owned by royalty, the church, and a handful of the nobility, is now owned by SEVEN MILLION FRENCHMEN.

Those men with their sons held Verdun. They were fighting for land that THEY OWNED.

Too few in the United States own the land of this country, or the houses in which they live.

But, fortunately, there are more than 10,000,000 that own automobiles. The automobile is ALSO A HOME, and a genuine home, one that you can take where you will, and that will TAKE YOU wherever you will.

More automobile owners, more home owners will mean greater stability of government, greater opportunity for this nation to complete what it has only begun—the EXPERIMENT IN SELF-GOVERNMENT.

One step toward more widespread ownership of homes should be taken, and one thing ought to be done.

THERE OUGHT TO BE NO TAXATION ON A LOW-PRICED HOME IN WHICH A MAN IS RAISING HIS FAMILY.

Every man should be entitled to a home worth at least $10,000 without paying a dollar's worth of tax to anybody.

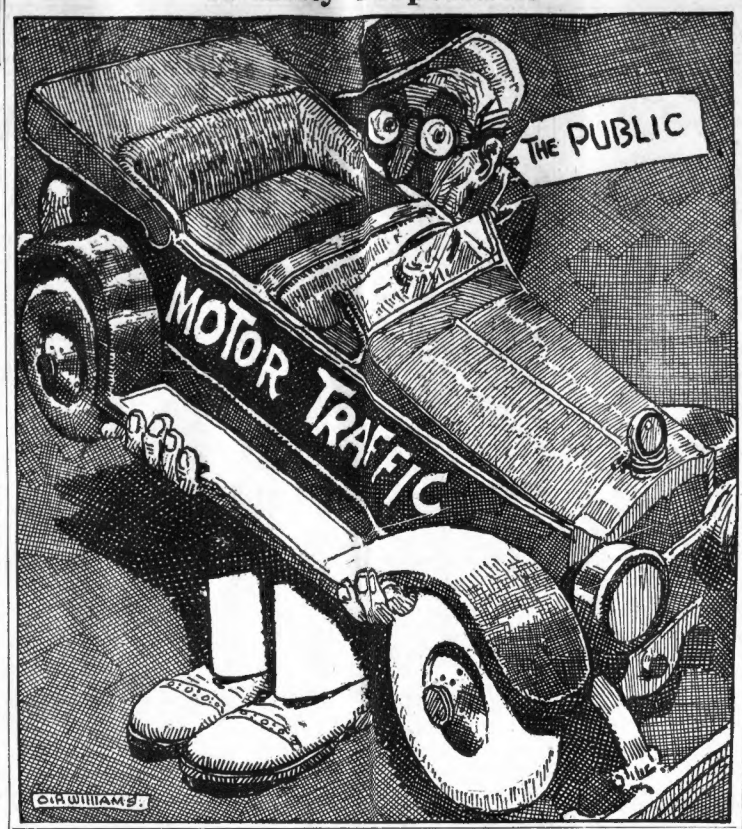
The house in which a man brings up his children is a public institution, and a SACRED INSTITUTION.

If it is all right, and IT IS ALL RIGHT, to free from taxation the great Protestant Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York, costing $15,000,000, it is also all right, or rather it OUGHT to be all right, to free from taxation the little house in which the man and woman are bringing up their children.

If the founder of Christianity came back to this earth, which do you think he would tax and which exempt from taxation, the $15,000,000 CATHEDRAL, or the $2,000 home?

No tax on the modest home would BE A GOOD POLITICAL SLOGAN TO GO ALONG WITH THE OTHER HIGHLY POPULAR NOTE: "Don't take more than 25 per cent. of the rich man's total income."

A Hefty Proposition



MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

THIS is the time of the year when hobos are leaving the road and going back to their wives for the Winter.

THEY'RE single in the Summer and married during the cold months.

SO far, very few States have steam heated highways.

AND country roads aren't paved with hot water bags.

A TRAMP likes to keep his feet warm, but he can't do it by putting them in his pocket.

ONE hobo hit on a great idea. He built a fire in his shoes.

THIS only trouble was that the hot coals burned holes in his socks.

BUT you couldn't fool him: he took his socks off.

WINTER is a nice time of the year to travel, but not if you're touring by foot.

WALKING gets tiresome no matter how much you coast.

SOME tramps like to do their burning in the Winter months because it gets so cold the bull dogs are afraid to open their mouths.

AND even if they did bite, what the weather is forty below zero it's wonderful to feel a dog's warm breath on your heels.

ONE tramp was so cold last Winter that he went up to a back door and begged the lady of the house to hit him with a stove.

BUT the woman got so mad she threw an electric fan at him.

HE had to go down and argue with a policeman in order to work up a sweat.

AND than just as he was getting hot the cop knocked him cold.

HE had to commit suicide to get warm.

EVEN then he was taking a chance. He might have gone to heaven.

HUNDREDS of tramps are going to New York and moving into telephone booths.

STRIKES UNKNOWN

By Temple Manning

IN the independent State of Nepal, which is situated on the northeastern frontier of India, there are very few of the advantages of civilization, and by the same token the inhabitants are free from its disadvantages.

Imagine a country where freight trains are never delayed, a land where street cars never jump the track, a place where automobile tires never go flat, and a State where there are no railroad strikes. Such is Nepal.

For the very good reason that strong, brown Mongolian men and women come from the foothills of Thibet to carry the burdens on their backs or in baskets at the end of a pole.

Over the mountain passes, down dangerous descents, up the rockiest of narrow paths these burden bearers go with their tremendous loads.

Without any evidence of wariness or of bad humor the coolies go all day long transporting loads of a hundred pounds and more. After the long journey they seem entirely satisfied when they receive fifty or sixty cents in the coin of India.

Food supplies, bundles of clothing, furniture, and even pianos are carried by these coolies.

One might surmise that all the inhabitants of Nepal are engaged in the task of carrying freight across the hills. But in the valley of Nepal, where every smallest spot is in cultivation, the men, women and children plant, cultivate and harvest the rice crops as well as other grains, vegetables and fruit. It would seem that the rest of the present class are engaged in soldiering.

Anyway, it takes very little of this world's goods to supply the simple needs of these Gurkhas, Newars and Bhutias.

The government, although a monarchy, is a just one. The people are cheerful folks with soft voices and a love for color and harmony.

The relation with other countries is rather friendly, notwithstanding the fact that there are some portions of Nepal which are not open to outsiders and special permits must be secured before journeys can be made into the interior.

In the city there are evidences of ancient and modern civilization. During the festivals, which are a part of Nepal metropolitan life, the displays approach grandeur and the militia is always given an opportunity to parade in full regalia.

Even the coolies join in the festivities and disport themselves as though there were no burdens waiting to be borne across the mountain passes.

Bible Misprint

To the Friend of the People:

There is on exhibition in Boston for a few weeks a peculiar edition of the Bible which contains one error.

Psalm 119, at the 161 verse, has been misprinted so as to read: "Printers have persecuted me without a cause."

Instead of PRINTERS read PRINCES.

Someone years ago in this edition of the bible, got back at the printers in this way for a personal reason.

Cows Dry at Week-End?

To the Friend of the People:

Why is it that milk delivered on Sunday mornings generally has more water in it than on any other day of the week?

I would like your readers to explain this. Upon several occasions I found my milk very weak on Sunday mornings.

The only explanation I could get was from a neighbor who said that there was more demand for milk on Sunday mornings, and consequently more water had to be added to it.

JOHN G. GILMAN.

Teachers' Homes

To the Friend of the People:

Finds the meeting which will soon be held by the school committee on the question whether a teacher in Boston schools should be a resident of the city in order to qualify.

This demand is an attack upon personal liberty. It is nobody's business where I live, if I properly give my best to my duties and am always on time.

It is cheaper to live in the suburbs in some small town than in Boston.

Pretty soon the school committee will provide a certain menu for teachers to eat to keep up their mental prowess.

Bachelors and Marriage

To the Friend of the People:

What a nerve a bachelor must have to lecture on marriage in one of the cities of Greater Boston?

There he stood and said many things about marriage from his point of view. I would like to ask your readers what does a bachelor know about marriage?

Then why is it that High Church Episcopal ministers, celibates, are always talking about divorce and condemning it? For mercy sake, let bachelors be reasonable!

GREAT SOULS ALWAYS EXPECT MUCH

By DR. FRANK CRANE

ONE of the most cowardly and enervating of doctrines is the one:

"Don't expect anything and you won't be disappointed."

Born of the fear of personal suffering it is the father of shallow character.

The great souls have always expected much. They have plunged in staking their all on their faith.

Only the vacillating and feeble adway the uncertain, half-heartedly, with a weak smile and a bow ready for the jeering crowd in case of failure.

Not in failure, but in lacking courage even to try is real defeat.

"Worse than a quitter is the man who is afraid to begin."

Not laughter from the taunting crowd, but acceptance by it into its folds as a supine inconsequential is the real disgrace.

Not in being deceived, but in never having trusted lies the real tragedy.

The great souls suffer and are refined in the suffering.

The revealed deficiency of a trusted friend pierces deep when no armor of carelessness is worn.

Sincerity often brings sadness, but it is the heart's blood of character.

Taking life seriously is like lifting up on the plow-handles of an old-fashioned plow. It points the plowshare down. It makes the pulling hard, but it plows deep.

Taking a light, flippant, careless attitude toward life is like pushing down on the plowhandles. It points the plowshare up. It means the pulling will be easier at the time, for it is plowing only the surface.

But the true gold of life lies deeper than the surface.

A cynic said, "If you want to love people don't expect too much of them."

But in real life the one who loves people best and sees the fineness in them most clearly is the one who does expect much of them.

We all tend to measure up when much is expected of us, and to slump in an atmosphere of depreciatory opinions. We may not completely meet expectations, but we come nearer by having someone believe that we are going to do it.

Lifting up on the plowhandles, getting under the surface of life, and taking things seriously may sometimes seem to add to the burden, but it is the source of the truly great in human character.

WAR BENT TO SCIENCE AS IT WILL AGAIN

By Garrett P. Serviss,

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

IN the "Memoirs" of M. Jussecrand, whose long term of service as French representative at Washington was recently closed, there occurs a passage which strikingly illustrates the beneficent influence of science upon the peace and amity of nations.

During our Revolutionary War, when France had joined hands with us and sent a fleet and an army to aid the colonies against Great Britain, Captain Cook was on one of his celebrated voyages of discovery, and, as he had no ocean cables and no wireless telegraphy to transmit daily news of his movements, nobody knew just where he was or when he would return.

At this junction the French War Minister, Turgot, reminded his king, Louis XVI., that:

"Captain Cook is probably on his way back to Europe. His expedition having no other object than the progress of human knowledge, and interesting, therefore, all nations, it would be worthy of the king's magnanimity not to allow that the result be jeopardised by the chances of war."

Orders Given.

"Orders should be given to all French naval officers to abstain from any hostile act against him or his ship and allow him freely to continue his navigation and to treat him in every respect as the custom is to treat the officers and ships of neutral and friendly countries."

The king assented to the suggestion of his enlightened minister, and the French cruisers were notified to that effect.

This is one of those rare incidents of history that make readers "sit up and take notice." It is so far out of the common that it surprises and refreshes like a pleasant, unexpected breeze.

While reading M. Jussecrand's account, one feels an accession of universal human friendliness, and becomes, at least momentarily, proud of his kind.

One of the objects of Captain Cook's voyaging was to make observation of a transit of Venus, then the only good method known of measuring the distance from the earth to the sun.

The only real road to settled peace is that of science; politics will never hit it, nor dogmatic religion either. Science is, in its very nature, universal. It interests all civilized nations alike.

It has no favorites, and no preferred views. Its aim is absolutely single, viz. the uncovering of the truth. Knowledge is power—not partial but complete power, which cannot make war upon itself.

Mankind has tried the other two roads to peace—the road of political jealousy and the road of religious bigotry and found them both equally misleading.

Tribute to Capt. Cook.

Perhaps it will now try the third, the road of scientific truth, the only road on which the passenger is not deceived—like a skittish horse with blinders. Science does not, ostrich-like, bury its head amidst perils and difficulties. It tries to see everything exactly as everything is.

People in general instinctively recognize this character of science, and that is why Turgot, long ago, paid his remarkable tribute of admiration and sympathetic appreciation to Captain Cook.

It is also the reason for the splendid demonstration of popular confidence in the honesty and the high ideas of science that we have just been witnessing in connection with the attempted auto-da-fe, in Tennessee.

Revived methods of the Inquisition are revealed in the light that illumines science, as only a rusty heap of thumbscrews and iron boots, and a dust-covered display of torture wheels and "iron maidens"—a dyspeptic's dream of a nightmare age.

FAITH IN A CHILD GIVES HIM SELF-CONFIDENCE

You are disappointed as a parent that your child is not among the brightest in school.

Perhaps you are sarcastic about it. Maybe you protest that you have a son or a daughter who will never amount to anything.

Do you realize that by such remarks you are sowing seeds which will make that child "good-for-nothing"?

When a boy reaches the stage where he begins to believe that he is "no good" and cannot make a success no matter how hard he tries, that boy is likely to become a drifter down "the easiest way."

As a parent you should be the last one to discourage him.

Don't tell him he is not up to standard, but tell him he must try harder, and then he will come up to the standard.

Keep before him the fact that you believe he is made of the right stuff—

Then you are backing him to win—make him see it, and he will try. If you go back on him it is probable he will lose out, for you are the one who should stick by him.
